

Where Bookmobile Will Be Next Week

Free book service will be offered to persons in certain communities of Washington County next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday as the county bookmobile takes its thrice-weekly tour of the county. Persons who desire the services of the bookmobile can have this desire fulfilled by signalling the bookmobile to stop by placing a piece of red material on their mail boxes.

Excess Cotton Is To Be Penalized

North Carolina cotton farmers with "excess acres" were warned recently that any excess cotton produced this year will be subject to a marketing quota penalty of 17.5 cents per pound.

H. C. Blalock, state specialist, said farmers are currently being notified of the measured acres of cotton allotted for their farm. Marketing cards, which certify that the cotton produced from a farm is free of marketing quota penalties, will not be issued for farms with "excess acres" until the marketing quota penalty has been paid, said Blalock. The penalty may be paid at the county ASC office in the county in which the cotton was produced.

Unless the marketing quota penalty on excess cotton has already been paid, buyers will deduct a penalty of 17.5 cents for each pound of upland cotton marketed.

Blalock emphasized that growers whose cotton acreage is within their acreage allotment are eligible for marketing cards and can market penalty-free all the cotton produced in 1954 if it is properly identified. Growers who are eligible for marketing cards will be mailed their cards before extensive harvesting begins.

Americans sent 121,000,000 pounds of mail to overseas servicemen during 1953, says the National Geographic Society.

Question: Are the organized feeder calf sales a good place to buy beef calves in North Carolina?
 Answer: Yes. For one thing the animals sold in these sales are uniform in quality and type. They have been selected by experts who know their business and each animal will have been dehorned, vaccinated and castrated.

Question: What happens to the money set aside for soil conservation if farmers fail to use it?
 Answer: The money is turned back to the general fund of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. On July 31 this year North Carolina farmers had nearly $5 million of federal funds approved for conservation practices; a recent check showed that less than $1 million has been used, or reported on.

Question: Some insect is cutting twigs off my pecan trees. What is it and what can I do?
 Answer: The insect is known as the twig girdler. The only practical control is to pick up and burn the twigs as they fall. These twigs contain eggs, so by burning the twigs you can destroy eggs that would hatch more beetles for next year. You will also need to burn twigs from hickory and persimmon trees as the same insect attack these two trees as well.
