Angry WAVES In Washington

Washington, (AP)—There are a couple of hundred angry WAVES in Washington, but don't think for a minute that they are saying anything about it openly. They are the girls who live in barracks within a stone's throw of the Navy building.

At first, according to barracks rules, no man was allowed any further in the building than the reception room just inside the front door. The rest of the sprawling quarters were strictly a woman's domain. The girls got the sorority house habit. They ran up and down the halls in their scanties, visited in negligee and enjoyed a privacy that made even barracks life a pleasure.

Then the worst happened. A navy brass hat came to town and was unable to find quarters for himself and family. A bright idea occurred to him. He had the walls knocked out of several rooms in the WAVES barracks and put himself together an apartment for himself and family.

The rush to buy dressing robes was something. Now all is dearness in the barracks, but there's a lot of underbitch mumbled as the WAVES peer around corners to see if the coast is clear before dashing for the showers or the room of some mopey for a snack before lights out.

The greatest Paris flood on record occurred in 1910, when the Seine rose 31 ft. 4 in. above normal.

Knit Sweaters to Buy More Bonds

Sweaters are dear to the school-girl's heart. Because she likes them warm, colorful, and smartly styled, she is knitting her own to have these qualities on a minimum budget. Fashionable extended shoulders and cardigan necklines with top buttons for this gray sweater gaily striped with bands of yellow, red and green. There's a matching stocking cap for campus and sports wear. Invest the precious money saved by knitting your own sweaters in extra War Bonds.

Some Tricks for the Teen-Age Group

Teen-agers have to be on their toes this year. If they don't want to get that juvenile delinquent stamp, they've got to be more conscious than ever of grooming and make-up.

The days of the girl with "too obvious glamor" are gone, and the "too made up look" is as passe and obsolete as the pompadour that is too high or the page boy coiffure that is too long.

At a recent posture class at Hunter High School, beauty consultant Ann Delafield advised girls in their teens to use as little make-up as possible and to achieve a natural glamor glow by eating protective foods that protect not only health but beauty. She advised a breakfast always including fruit juice and steamed fruit. A beauty's lunch, said Miss Delafield, should always be preceded by one large dinner plate of raw vegetable salad. Between-meal eating should be confined to fruit juice and milk drinking.

Soap and water scrubbing plus a good lubricating cream are a must for the girl who wants to keep her skin shining. She must also exercise daily in fresh air. Though Miss Delafield believes that no girl under 15 should use a make-up, she says that with a mother's permission a girl of 15 may start using lipstick.

When she starts to use real make-up, however, she should be careful never to use rouge too generously, or apply powder carelessly, giving a floury look. Her lipstick should not

A Nutritious Appetizer Stuffed Celery Irish Lamb Stew Cracked Wheat Bread Pineapple Whip Chocolate Squares (Recipes serve four)

Stuffed Celery 8 stalks celery 1 cake cream cheese 1 teaspoon onion, minced 2 tablespoons chili sauce 1/2 cup peanut butter 1/4 teaspoon salt 1 tablespoon tomato juice or milk Clean celery thoroughly and chill. Blend cheese, onion, chili sauce, peanut butter, salt and tomato juice together. Fill the celery with mixture and serve on individual plates in beds of lettuce.

Pineapple Whip 2 cups crushed pineapple 1/4 teaspoon salt 1 tablespoon sugar 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg 2 egg whites Beat whites of eggs until stiff. Beat in sugar, salt and nutmeg. Fold in pineapple and chill thoroughly in refrigerator.

Chocolate Squares 1-3 cup shortening 1 cup sugar 1 egg, beaten 1 teaspoon vanilla 1-3 cup cocoa 1/2 cup cream 3/4 cup flour 1/2 teaspoon baking powder 1/2 cup broken nuts Cream shortening with sugar and egg. Add vanilla, cocoa, cream, flour and baking powder. Beat a minute. Pour into shallow pan lined with waxed paper. Sprinkle batter with nuts. Bake 25 minutes in moderate oven. Cool, cut in bars and pack tightly in metal box.

be a slap-dash application nor should her hair be wild and woolly. Rouge should be applied sparingly, high on the cheeks, carefully blended from cheekbone in. Powder should be carefully pressed on, and the surplus brushed off. Lipstick should be put on with a lipstick brush, following the natural line of the mouth. Hair should be carefully brushed, exercised daily to keep the shoulders straight, the tummy in and the cheeks glowing.

An important thing to remember however, is that no matter how well a girl's makeup is applied and how neatly her hair is arranged, if she has a poor posture the whole effect is spoiled. It is important to do some posture exercises daily to keep the shoulders straight, the tummy in and the cheeks glowing.

HOLLYWOOD ARTIST TURNS HIS BACK ON DAYS WORK

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—Carl Crouse is an artist who turns his back on his work. He paints his back on his work. He paints his back on his work. He paints his back on his work.

Carl turns them out to order. He can whip up woolly wisps in a moonlit sky or heavy day-time rain clouds at will, and he can spot a nifty sky puff of any size or density wherever the cameraman might want it in any scene.

When you see "The Enchanted Cottage" you'll see Dorothy McGuire and Robert Young wandering along a Massachusetts shoreline gathering driftwood. The sky is filled with storm clouds—Crouse clouds.

A small, bright-eyed man who hails from Johnstown, Pa., (which nativity may or may not have turned his mind to clouds and their sometime aftermath), Crouse can be spotted on the set by the peculiar, oblong green eye-shade he wears to protect his highly trained eyes from the intense light behind the glass on which he paints.

Turning his back isn't enough, as he found out once when he sneaked a quick glance at his handiwork and lost the sight of one eye for a frightening period of time.

His painting is done a piece of special quartz heat-treated glass, mounted in an octagonal wooden frame five feet high. This is set in photographic effect. Because no human eye could stand even a quick glance into the blinding light, Crouse paints over his left shoulder, never looking at the glass but watching the results as they are created in magnified form on the canvas ahead of him. Sometimes the glass on which his clouds are painted is so mounted that it can be moved sideways by motor to give a remarkably realistic animated effect.

The Crouse clouds have been imitated at various times but never with complete success because of the peculiarity of his technique. The imitators think it looks easy until they try it. They forget that it took Crouse, who was formerly an illustrator on a Los Angeles newspaper, nine years of behind-the-back painting to achieve his present skill.

front of a huge and blinding arc lamp, so that the artist's work is projected in terms of light and shadow on huge canvas backdrops to help create the illusion of outdoor settings inside studio sound stages.

He starts by covering the entire glass with flake white oil paint. Then, with brushes, cloth and razor blade he proceeds to remove the paint to leave openings which become his clouds. Thus he actually achieves a "negative" in which blacks and whites are reversed for

Household Hints

You will get more vitamin C from an orange by eating it whole than you will by extracting the juice.

Electric plugs can be made to fit tighter by simply spreading the prongs apart a little with your fingers.

When storing garments, put tissue papers between the folds and insert wadded tissue paper in the sleeves to prevent wrinkling.

A new breed of sheep has been developed which is lighter in weight and with smaller bones. It may thus be possible to order a leg of lamb for two in a few years.

Ginger makes an excellent meat seasoning. Rub it on the inside of chicken or duck or over a leg of lamb—the flavor will be wonderfully improved.

Fruit juices like apple, cherry, grape, peach and pear juice contain little Vitamin C and when served in place of citrus fruits other C-rich foods should be served.

The Turks call the turkey "the American bird," since its original habitat is North America.

Facts About Coal

It's scarce, due to: shortage of labor in the mines and locally; restrictions on coal distribution, gas, and trucking; and the manifold needs of war and war plants. With utmost care and conservation by all of us, there'll be enough.
