

DOWN EAST WITH BILLY ARTHUR

James Street, the author who addressed the Eastern North Carolina Press Association at Wilson Friday night, pulled a good one that I can't wait to get around a Texan and pass on.

He was talking about the weather out there. "The wind really blows hard," said he, "and so do the Texans."

Harvey Laffoon, president of the State Press Association—who sent regards to Tom Shugart, handed down a recipe for an enjoyable talk.

1. A good ending. 2. A good ending. 3. Put them as close together as possible.

For years people have been casting aspersions, being very critical and otherwise slandering my ability to write. They have had some mighty unkind words to say about the legibility of the results...

But now, the worm has turned. When someone else in the office took the notes on the reception for Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Leon Gray, to me one part of the writing looked as if they Grays had been given a silver picture. So I made it a silver framed picture.

Anyway, some of the women were talking about the boner the other evening and one of them remarked, "It's disgusting," she said. "Regardless of how it happened. Was no excuse for it. Had Billy been there, like he should have been, he would have known better."

A discussion of hunting and its attendant expenses came up for a thorough airing the other night, and one fellow speculated that every bird killed by a hunter cost about $5, if not more.

It was about like my cost per fish about three years ago when I purchased a new rod and reel, line, plugs, a bobber and went fishing several times down in the sound, and brought back only a few fish.

I figured that every fish I caught that season cost me $2.32, which is a pretty steep price for croakers and spots.

I told the boys about that, and they agreed it was pretty costly but hardly as much as the stamp collecting hobby.

Our local stamp collectors have a habit of going into the post office and buying one section of four stamps here-on-a-sheet, and there-on-a-sheet and somewhere-else-on-a-sheet.

They say a 3 cent stamp or some denomination is worth more in the corner or in the center of a sheet than it is somewhere else. And to be on the safe side, several buy a whole sheet of 100 stamps.

One time, however, Mr. Farley came out with a nice purple affair, one of the most beautiful stamps I ever saw, selling for $1 each. Boy, that stumped me. The fellows who had been buying full sheets bought sections, and the fellows who had been purchasing sections bought singletons.

They're expensive hobbies, all right, almost expensive as mine, photography.
