Celebration Indulged in for Centuries Are Still Kept Up.

The mention of hot cross buns immediately suggests England, where they are used more universally than Julian P. Galloway's corner, same being perhaps any other country. And while England is not a Catholic country, so-called, rural customs of all kinds, religious and otherwise, have an unusually firm hold. One of the very strangest Easter-day customs is called the harepie festival, enacted in Leicestershire, at the village of Hallaton. Every Easter morning a brass band heads a procession which takes in most everybody in the town.

They parade through the streets and after a short service at the Episcopal church the rector, aided by two or three officials of the village, cuts up a large rabbit pie, which has been baked for the occasion. These pieces of pie are fought for by boys and young men, down a hillside called Hare Bank, and it is considered something to be proud of to deserve the largest cut of the

This is followed by a feast in the principal tavern or church, and ale in abundance is consumed, an affair which precedes a football match famous over the whole of the county, and looked forward to by theusands of spectators every year.

* ASTER begins, like all deep things, in mystery, and it ends, like all high things, in a great courage. We are not beaten; that is its message to the mind. We cannot be beaten; that is its message to the heart.

Easter Fires.

The early Saxons used to light Easter nres on the hills in expression of their joy; this custom only died out in the early part of the nineteenth century. It is only observed up to this day in the "Woods of Teutoburgum," where, on the eve of Easter Sunday, the fires are lit, as of old.

Season of Hope. Lift up your hearts! Easter is the testival of hope, the day of certainty.
