Respond to the colors by cheerfully registering June 5 under the army bill provisions if between the ages of 21 and 31 years. Evasion carries a heavy penalty.

That Transylvania county should have suffered by forest fires during the past year to the extent of $14,240 is a state of affairs that needs to be improved upon. That is the price of carelessness.

Don't overlook the importance of registering on June 5. Failure is likely to mean heavy punishment whether you are white or black, weak or strong, provided you are between the ages of 21 and 31 years.

"Editor Hollowell of the Brevard News is offering a house in that town at a bargain, namely $2,534.59. Sounds like a bargain sale of last year's millinery," jests the Waynesville Courier. We are delighted to advise you of the very painful fact that there is nothing of a millinery significance attached to either the price or ownership.

Summer Schedules

"The service on the Toxaway line will be the same as at present," is a line taken from a story in the Asheville Times relative to the elaborate summer train schedules of the Southern to the mountains. This looks like scant attention from the Southern but when you turn the problem around the Southern has done far more for us in the way of advertising for tourists this year than we have done for ourselves. We certainly need to be aroused from our lethargy and the Southern seems to be administering the first deserved dose.

The attempt to secure a better schedule is altogether timely and if given will be highly appreciated. As a tourist section this territory will suffer considerably if the present schedule is operated this year. It will result in an antagonistic spirit that the Southern can ill afford.

Brevard Institute

In the very able commencement sermon by Rev. R. M. Courtney last Sunday he called attention to the habit people have of seeking something at a far distance when things just as good, or better, are within arm's reach.

This is true of individuals or communities and at this particular time at the close of another successful year for Brevard Institute it is opportune for us as a community of people to refresh the appreciation we should have for this worthy institution. We are prone to look afar off for something in the sky and entertain ideals as to attainments we would like to reach in the way of a tourist, industrial, agricultural or educational section and at the same time sadly underestimate the value of those things we have in our midst and through neglect growing out of indifference fail to give them our moral as well as financial support.

These lines are written in the hope that at this commencement time, when we are drawn closer to Brevard Institute than common, we will see the importance of fostering a warm spirit of appreciation and co-operation and keeping ever in mind the value of such an institution that is contributing greatly to moral and educational uplift of not only this but far distant communities, where its influence will be felt for years. When we consider the good work of the Institute and the ennobling and enriching influence to the community of these responsible for the school's success we must regard the institution and what it means to us as an asset of highest value.

May Brevard Institute's usefulness rapidly increase with passing years.

What Registration Means

The young people of the country view the war situation more seriously from day to day as they approach the date of registration, June 5, for all men without regard to color, physical or moral condition, are required to register.

While registration does not necessarily mean war service now or at any future time, a registration of ten million men in the United States is expected and from this the first draft of about half a million will be made according to present plans.

Failure to register or false representation as to possible grounds of exemption from war service invites a heavy punishment from Uncle Sam, therefore young men between 21 and 31 years cannot exercise too much care in such a serious matter.

The News deplures the fact that army and navy recruiting officers in their unguarded zeal have resorted to seemingly bad tactics in their efforts to get recruits. They attempt in statements and advertisements in newspapers to reflect upon the young men who will not volunteer and enlist in some branch of service by referring to them as the "went" or "sent" class, meaning that those who register for selective draft are the "sent" by compulsion.

Government authorities do not mean to attach a stigma to registration. This is the carefully thought-out plan of conducting the war. The term of selective draft should not be associated with the idea of "conscription," so unpopular in Civil war times.

Of course if actual service is to be seen, and it is very probable that it will be, there are advantages to be had in volunteering in some branch of service, which can be done either before or after registration. These advantages are to be found in the selection of the branch of service preferred, something of the men with whom the volunteers will be associated, their officers, opportunities for promotion, etc.

The young men should cheerfully register with no sense of stigma or reflection upon their patriotism, record reasons for exemption, if any, and stand ready for the call to service should it come, and as for those who grow too impatient about the matter or who have well-defined preferences, various branches of the service are ready to receive them.

Effort Being Made to Use Every Student of Brevard Institute in Emergency Work.

Chancellor Hollowell in order to give preference to the desire of the Institute students for taking part in the most productive labor during the summer months, a commission has been organized by Dr. J. B. Ballitt which will be distributed to all the students still left here. As less than ten per cent of the entire student body has enrolled in military training camps the other 90 per cent will concern itself where possible, with problems of food production, mechanical aid, or some other form of profitable war-time labor. In a recent speech to the student body, President Graham impressed upon the students the patriotic duty of productive labor during the summer months. Students under the conscription age and those below the physical requirements for military service were especially mentioned.

Students of the University of North Carolina are just as eager to do their bit in agricultural and mechanical labor as in training for the battlefield, but the University committee feels it would be futile to recommend just farm work, without bringing about some co-ordination between the farms in need of labor and the supply, which may be in part filled by college men. It is the purpose of this questionnaire to provide for the intelligent placing of college men where their labors may be most effective. The work of the training camps is only one of many features that the University hopes to assist in. Many students have already found fields of productive labor during the summer, and the others will be helped to find such places, especially those who do not come from farm homes. Co-operation will be effected between the University and the state, county and town councils of national defense.

The following information is sought in the questionnaire: Previous training in various fields—agricultural, mechanical, clerical and miscellaneous; place for occupation during the summer of 1917; how the student expects to be occupied next year; willingness to undertake some form of productive work which may directly or indirectly benefit our country in the prosecution of the war.

Heavy Hailstorm at Wilmington.

Wilmington.—Two hail storms that hit this city and outlying districts did damage to crops, fruit trees and buildings that will run far into the thousands of dollars.

The first, which came at 11:35 in the morning was of five minutes duration and during this time stones almost as large as hen eggs pelted down, smashing skylights, breaking windows and cutting holes in automobile tops parked on the streets.

The second, which came an hour and a half later, did great damage in the county, completely wiping out crops in certain sections. At places the stones drifted six inches deep, corn was cut down and vegetables shrouded by the unusually large stones. The hot houses of florists were wrecked and the plants greatly damaged. A portable house that was being erected at Wrightsville Beach collapsed, narrowly averting serious injury to workmen.

Claxton Speaks at Raleigh.

Raleigh.—"Education for a New Era" was the theme of a powerful address by Commissioner P. P. Claxton, of the United States Department of Education, in connection with the closing exercises of the Raleigh Public Schools when diplomas were given to 52 students. Mr. Claxton characterized the World War as a war for world democracy which is sure to come. Whether the struggle be long or short at its close there will be the greatest demand for trained men and women for all the avenues of human endeavor and America must furnish the great majority of them for the whole world. Even now the demand is great as a world need shown by the first call of the Allies on Americans for aid having been for 12,000 trained engineers to rebuild their railways and for other construction work that demands the most skilled workmen.
