PLUMBING and PLUMBING SUPPLIES

FOR A FLY- LESS BREVARD

Editor Brevard News:

I hear that the ladies of the Betterment Association are contemplating a campaign against the common fly. I believe this is a good move and one that will add to the health and comfort of our town. I understand that the ladies are going to work in a businesslike manner and have appointed a committee to gather information from "flyless" communities on the subject in order to find out the best means of combating this pest and driving it from our borders. As is well known the eggs of the fly are laid in the manure of the horse or cowstable or hog pen, and hatch out in a few days into a grub or maggot which is much enjoyed by the domestic fowl. They breed and multiply with marvellous rapidity, and as the warm weather advances become a nuisance and annoyance to every body, and a menace to the health of both children and adults. Many a case of typhoid fever may be traced to the feet of the common fly.

Now comes the question, What can we as a community do to materially lessen, if not altogether, exterminate this nuisance and disease breeder?

First:—Let our city council strictly enforce the town ordinance against keeping hogs within the city limits and unsanitary toilets.

Second:—Enact a new ordinance requiring all stables and manure piles to be screened and made fly-tight.

Third:—Starve the fly in the home, the store, the hotel and restaurant by screening all doors and windows and by at once putting away all food after each meal and not leaving soiled dishes around for the flies to feed upon.

Fourth:—By helping any who cannot afford to screen their homes with gifts of screens.

Fifth:—By swatting the fly and by trapping it with fly paper. Powdered borax sprinkled in the stable or manure pile will also kill larva or maggot.

In putting up screens let us use the galvanized screen wire, it costs a little more but once put up is good for several years. Painted screen wire may be preserved by a coat of linseed oil even after it has started to rust. Don't forget to paint the screen frames for they soon rot if left unpainted.

And while we are screening our homes let us not overlook our schools and churches. Nothing is more annoying when trying to listen to a sermon than the festive fly which alights on your nose, investigates your ear and tries to crawl down your back. In your home you could swat him but you don't like to disturb the service by doing so in church.

And what is more annoying to our children in school than the pesky flies which crawl in their mouths after having first investigated the sore places on their bare feet.

I want our summer visitors to say, when they go back home, "Do you know there's the fewest flies in Brevard than any place I have ever visited."

No More Flies

There's no flies in our home;
No siree! No siree!
There's no flies in our home
And, "there's no flies on me."

There's no flies in our home
And no flies on our food.
We've swatted and trapped
And screened them out good.

No flies on our baby:
No flies in its milk.
No germs typhoid fever,
And all that sad ilk.

No flies in our bedroom
To tickle our nose
When from "Baby all night"
We fall off in a dose.

No flies in our churches;
No flies in our school.
Children study in comfort,
All the churches are full.

So let's keep on a swatting
and keep up the screen
Till flies in our country
Shall ne'er more be seen.
