

Divine Lesson in the Garnering of the Golden Grain

The summer is over and the harvest is past. The sad skies, the bleak fields, the bare trees, the raw winds that whistle and groan and sob and sigh their dirges mournfully remind us that the season of fruitage has gone by and the time has come when we can only turn away, each to himself, and measure up our garnerings.

1 Nature gives us a seed time and a harvest time.

But these would be meaningless to us did she not also send a season when, at the warning touch of chill, we must measure our gains and consider our losses.

But for the lessons of this season no man would labor; we would know naught of temperance or thrift; we would go through the bright spring only singing, and idle away the summer in dreams.

So it is part of the divine plan that each of us should now go apart and carefully separate the wheat from the chaff, the flowers from the weeds, and that which is good and sound and enduring from all that perishes and taints. It is now that each must honestly examine and weigh the product of his own works.

It were useless now to try to deceive even ourselves.

Now, if at no other time, we see the vast difference in value between the picked fruit and the windfalls.

The one heap we proudly store away, knowing it will keep sweet and whole to the winter's depths, and the other we cast aside, that it may not contaminate as it rots.

It is a sad, sweet task-sweet for the counted gains, sad for the opportunities lost and to come no more.

And as we garner the gains we also garner wisdom.

As we separate the wheat from the chaff and the sound fruit from the windfalls, so, whether we will or not, Christian Herald.

we must in the inner consciousness separate the true from the false in principles of labor and living.

No man, even of three-score-aye, four-score and ten, has ever known this law to fail in a single season. It knows no variation in all the cycles of

But grains and fruits are not all that we are garnering. Chaff and weeds are not all we ought to separate and cast away. There are things more important still. In the storehouse of the heart and mind and soul, is it not well to seek, just as carefully, though sometimes in vain, to keep only the better, the brighter, the more enduring things?

When the bicak November of life Dreary will be the winter to him whose granaries are empty. But drearier and more desolate still must be the winter of oid age to the man or woman whose mind and heart and soul have brought from the harvest only the joys that are chaff and the virtues that are mere windfalls, attained and adhered to only through easy convenience.

When that winter comes, as it must to many of us, we shall have only ourselves to turn to, and we shall find only that which we have sown and harvested in the bright spring and golden summer-the good grain, the sound fruit, the flowers, the high impulses, the sacrifices, the loves, yes, and the cheat, the chaff, the weeds, the windfalls, the hates, the jealousies. the low passions—all these and nothing more, to sustain us or to render us desolate.

We may, if we will, make each day a cycle of all the seasons. We sow each morning and reap each noon and garner each evening the fruits of our living in this little day. Day by day, if we strive on in right and hope and courage, must our knowledge and our strength, and our store increase. Day by day, through many failings and tallings, do we come nearer to the true manhood and the true woman-Good.—Charles Grant Miller in the

Suggested Motto for Nation Today

"Think and Thank" was the motto upon the family crest of the great Hebrew philanthropist Sir Moses Montefiore. It would be an appropriate armorial motto for America today. These two little English words, differing in a single vowel, were originally identical. In the Anglo-Saxon tongue, a "thank" was a "think." Thanking comes from thinking, and thankfulness from thoughtfulness and thanks giving from thought-giving. This will be a season of unusual thanksgivingnot been wont to think. It will be a very selfish soul that this season falls to think of the sorrows and the sufferings of others.

Look back at that first American settlements, sparse larder, savage enemy, but thankful spirit! What makes cious? His thankfulness! As Howell puts it:

a thankful heart is like a box of preclous ointment which keeps the smell long after the thing is spent."

Daddy Gobbler's Premonition

There once did live a turkey cock, And he was very proud; And walking with his little flock He gobbled very loud. Perhaps it may your feelings shock-He lived beneath a cloud.

He could not speak of cranberry, Nor mention pumpkin pie Without a painful reverie, While tears stood in his eye. And sage, and summer savory, They always made him sigh.

And though in June he spread his tail, And looked lilke Henry Eight, November always found him pale, Sans Delsarte in his galt, if anyone would see him quall, Just say "decapitate."
