

THE LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE CAN ACCOMPLISH VERY MUCH, SAYS MEMBER OF BETTERMENT.

To the People of Brevard:

In a recent issue of the News there was a notice of a new organization, one which many people felt was really needed in Brevard — A Law and Order League.

Apparently, there is a certain amount of unwholesome sentiment as to law enforcement particularly in regard to prohibition laws.

It seems evident, that without a formal organization, whiskey makers, whiskey sellers, their patrons and friends, even their friends' friends, stand by each other with the utmost loyalty. Sometimes, this loyalty will not shrink even from perjury — as witness the man who unblushingly swears that he has entirely forgotten how he came into possession of the half pint he is carrying.

If the enemies of the law find their purposes served by "hanging together", it is natural to suppose that the friends of law enforcement would also find their cause strengthened by joining forces. And as the latter are not bound together by the same ties of mutual interest as the former, some definite organization seems desirable.

For such a league to accomplish much, two things are necessary.

I. It must have a strong backing of public sympathy, and

II. In order to have such a backing it must be judiciously managed.

It should have an executive committee of level headed people, who will work quietly though thoroughly, without bluster, and with entire good nature. It is quite possible to do this with no compromise of principles and if this rule is adhered to, much needless antagonism can be avoided.

Some one remarked, "I approve of the idea, but these societies amount to nothing because they are always run by cranks and fanatics."

Maybe so; but that must be because the saner, non-fanatical element stands aloof, and leaves the "running" in the hands of the extremists.

In this League, the officers at least (whose names appeared in the News are certainly not cranks.

As to how many of the members may be cranks, the writer is perhaps not a fair judge, being herself a member, and maybe a bit of a crank as well.

Now, Sir, Mr. Common-sense business man, and madam, Mrs. capable house-keeper, club woman, church worker, or whatever your special line of efficiency may be, come and help us. Give us the sound advice and practical ideas that can make the

IT WOULD seem that every clever girl may indulge herself in a variety of pretty coiffure ornaments, head bands and dance hats, to enhance her evening dress. Nothing does more, or even so much, as the head-dress to make an evening toilette a triumph and the evening head-dress of the present season is not intricate or at all difficult to make. One is up-to-the-minute in style with a wreath of leaves in silver, gold or bronze about the brows, finished with a splash of brown malines in full, airy loops at the back, like the lovely affairs sponsored by Paris shown in the picture, and anyone can make it.

Wheels of gold lace set against a band of brown satin when finished with a butterfly bow of brown malines, make an adorable head-dress of which two views appear in the picture. The wheels are centered with mock jewels—rhinestone or brown topaz cabochons make a good choice—and these mock jewels are very popular. They are shown in jade, amber, turquoise and other stones and can usually be found in fancy goods departments. The continued popularity of brown malines attests to its becomingness. For several seasons evening head-dress and evening hats have been finished with it, evidently to the satisfaction of those who wear them. Very youthful wearers care less for it than their elders, but mock jewels are greatly to their liking. For them there are lovely wreaths of small, metallized flowers, with just color enough and just shimmer enough to be enticing and, of course, they are enraptured with more splendid affairs made of pearl beads and rhinestones—but these belong to wearers who have the poise required to carry them well. Youth would better stick to its blossoms and leaves, its wreaths and ribbons—especially its ribbons. They offer a world of opportunity for beautiful evening head-dress. There are gay and splendid metal brocades among them, that may be brought about the head and tied in a bow. They are so gorgeous in themselves that even so simple an arrangement results in a touch of magnificence to finish off the toilette.

League a success. There is strength in numbers; and it was a very wise man who said, "In a multitude of counsellors there is safety". This is an unselfish organization, with no object but the good of the town, and the protection of the young. It should appeal to parents, and to all who have at least the interest of the town. M. C. J. Sec. Law and Order Dep't. Brevard Betterment Association. May 1st, 1921.

IN MEMORY OF PHOEBIA WILSON:

God has called her up to him from husband, children and home, up to the beautiful kingdom where none but angels roam.

How lonely the house and sad the hours since dear Aunt has gone, but when we reach that heavenly land we take dear aunt by the hand and there with Jesus we will stand.

I know I lost my dear aunt, she has bid us all adieu. She has gone to live with Jesus and her form from us is lost in view.

And I know a dear one from us is gone, a voice we love is still, and there is a vacant chair in our home which never can be filled.
