MR. BOWSER WRITES LETTERS 🛚

But He Has Not Mailed Them Yet. By M. QUAD.

Mr. Bowser came home smiling and good-natured. He had a look of importance on his face and he went about rubbing his hands, like a man who is well pleased

Mrs. Bowser knew that something had happened, but she asked no quesshe gave him time.

It was after dinner that he said: "Mrs. Bowser, I've done some work for the people of the United States to-

"You are always working for the

"Yes, most always; but I have

"Well, what is it?" "I have written several letters, which are going to be heard from all over the country. Here they are, all stamped and ready to be mailed." "I see that there is one directed to the President," said Mrs. Bowser, as she looked them over, "Yes, there is a letter to the President, and I think he will sit up and do some thinking when he reads it. It's time someone wrote him a letter and asked him some plain questions. in the great questions of Europe, he has forgotten that there are questo get two pairs for a quarter. De you know what they charged me to-

"Like everything else, the price has come up," answered Mrs. Bow-

"I should think it had! They asked me just three times what the old price was. Three times, Mrs. Bowser, and it's highway robbery. There is no excuse for it whatever; it's simply human greed. Does the President of the United States know that the price of men's socks has gone up to 35 cents? Does he know that if something is not done, the price of those socks will be 50 cents, and we will have to go barefoot in our shoes, or else submit to highway rob-

"I don't suppose the President knows anything about it," said Mrs

"But he should know all about it!" persisted Mr. Bowser. "He wears socks himself, don't he? And don't he know how much he has to pay Dark forms in the night -- the sib. for them? What did we elect him for? Must be be so interested in people of the United States have fallen into the hands of robbers you can look to see war again."

"Here is a letter to Senator Knox," said Mrs. Bowser, "but you have spelled his name wrong. 1 should be 'Knox,' and you have go it 'Knocks.' You will have to fix it."

"There'll be no fixing, Mrs. Bowser. I have spelled it 'Knocks' be eaten us alive. He has knocked one thing and another out and is still at it. I have written to him that coal is $11 a ton, and that there has been more mined than last year. It is the railroads, and the coult dealers who are robbing us, and they will continue to rob as long as nothing is done. Coal can be sold at $8 a ten and the other $3 is simply extortion. Um going to get Knoc after them, and the way the pieces of coal will fly around the United States will astonish everyone. If he takes hold of the plans I a e suggested, he will soive the problem in about a week. I have offered to go in with him." "And here is one to Senator Lower, said Mrs. Bowser, as she pic ii up the third letter. "les, ma'am, to Senator Lodge of Mussachusetts-Senator Henry Cabot Lodge-one of the most prominent men in the United States today. It was he who first aroused the nation SOUTHERN RAILWAY ANNOUN- to the fact that our Monroe doctrine was in peril. If he hadn't aroused the people, we would not have had any Monroe doctrine by this time."

Mrs. Bowser was uneasy for a min te, and then she asked:

A. Lowser, I am not totally ig ant of politics, but I don't exacti what the Monroe dectrine is."

"Why, it's just as easy as grease," was the reply. "There was a chap named Monroe and he had a good deal to do with the United States. He finally got the big head and he said to Europe that she must not come over to this continent and claim anything. He said we owned the whole darned show and we would fight to keep it. It seems that, in making the treaty of peace, Europe was to get the best of us, and, by and by, she might have come over here and sat down on our farm, but for Senator Lodge. He smelled a rat and he got right up in meeting and said so. I don't know whether this country can be saved or not, but if it is saved, then Senator Lodge will have all the credit of it. I am telling him to do his best and am oftions. He seemed to want her to, but fering to back him up. If he happens to run short of money, I will lend him $500."

> "And you have written one to the California senator," said Mrs. Bowser. "Yes, he is on the right side. He is keeping track of the meat question, and he will have all the Chicago packers in jail before he quits.. He's a mighty powerful man when he gets started." "And here is one to the Idaho senator,"

"And if it wasn't for him, butter would be a dollar a pound and milk 50 cents a quart. The robbers are afraid of him. The President goes right along and never asks the price of butter, but you bet your life, Senator Boise is keeping track of things. if we had a dozen senators like him. we would have old peace prices back in no time. I have written to Senator Boise that Samuel J. Bowser stands back of him to his last vest button. I think the senator will be greatly encouraged."

"And do you think you have helped matters any?" asked Mrs. Bowser. "Helped? Helped? Why, woman, I have done wonders! In just writbrought down prices. You can't tell what influence I have exerted. I have also written another letter to Senator Knocks, asking him to go right to work and knock down the price of bacon. I have shown him that there are just as many hogs in the country as there ever was, and Cleaning he high price of bacon was sheer robbery. By tomorrow I will expect the butchers will begin to drop on their "I hardly expect that," said Mrs. Bowser, "but there is a good chance or you to see. You are probably seing out this evening, and you might stop at the butcher's and ask tim if there is to be a come-down. We need some bacon for breakfast. would do this, before I mailed the etters, if I were you." Mr. Bowser took up his letters and vent out. There was a mail box at the corner, but he did not post his leters. He went on half a block to the outcher's and said to him:

"Butcher, you have been asking highway robbary prices for bacon. You have been asking 45 cents a bound. I have written to congress bout you. Are prices to come county, N. C., for the issuing and

"Mr. Bowser," softly answered the mons in the above stated cause: outcher, "I would like to sell you bacon for ten cents a bound, but it has gone up to 60 cents, and you must pay it, and congress be hanged!"

Mr. Bowser repassed the mail box as he went home, but he did not mail his letters. Instead of mailing them, he fore them to pieces.

Molding the Character.

Do not grudge the hand that is melding the still too shapeless image within you. It is growing more beautiful though you see it not, and every touch of temptation may add to its perfection. Therefore, keep in the midst of life. Be among men, and among things, and among troubles and difficulties and obstacles. Character plaintiff which will be deposited in grows in the stream of the world's life.—Henry Drummond.

Harp Thousands of Years Old.

What is said to be the oldest harp in the world is preserved at the Louvre museum in Paris. It was found in an Egyptian tomb, and is nearly 4,000 years old. Others dating back 3,000 years have been discovered. The harp was held in such high regard by the ancient Celtic races that harpers were treated with veneration and distinction, their lands being free and their persons sacred.
