MRS. BOWSER'S STORY

And Mr. Bowser's Adventure.

By M. QUAD.
 (© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Dinner was ready at the usual hour, but Mr. Bowser had not appeared. Mrs. Bowser waited three minutes, and then began to worry.

Why didn't Mr. Bowser come? Had he gone on a fishing excursion and been wrecked, and perhaps been cast on a lone island, miles and miles at sea? He might have gone up in a flying machine and taken a drop. He might have gone out into the country to buy a piece of land to raise grass-hoppers.

Half-past six, and no Mr. Bowser! Mrs. Bowser put on her hat and walked up to the car line. She stood on the corner for a quarter of an hour, and no Mr. Bowser. She returned to the house to telephone, but who could she telephone to? Who kept track and trace of Mr. Bowser?

The cook came up to console her, and she did it by saying:

"Do not worry, Mrs. Bowser. If Mr. Bowser has fallen off the roof of a building and been smashed all to jelly, that's the end of him, and you can't help him any by worrying. He may have climbed a tree and is afraid to come down."

Mrs. Bowser was moving toward the telephone, when it began to ring. She answered very quickly.

"Is this Mrs. Bowser?" was the inquiry.

"Yes—yes!"
 "Mrs. Samuel J. Bowser?"
 "Yes."
 "You live up on Third place, don't you?"
 "Yes, I do."
 "Well, don't get nervous when I tell you something. This is the police station, in the Sixth precinct."

"Is—is my husband dead?" was asked in a trembling voice.
 "Oh, no, madam. He is very much alive. Now, I will make you understand how the case is. A boy, who is a young thief, was stealing from a crook. A detective saw him and arrested him. The boy fought back, and he two had quite a scuffle in the street. Mr. Bowser was riding home in the car. He saw the row and thought the man was abusing the boy. He jumped off the car and mixed it up, as it is against the law to strike an officer while doing his duty, he was arrested and brought in."

"And nothing has happened to him?" asked Mrs. Bowser.
 "Well, yes and no, to that. He is a very lordly sort of a man, you must know. He thinks he runs the town. He began talking in a loud voice the minute he came into the station, and telling what would happen to us if we did not apologize and turn him loose. That's Mr. Bowser's way, isn't it?"
 "Why—why, he has ways about him," said Mrs. Bowser with a laugh.
 "I should think he had! When I told him that if he didn't shut up we would lock him up in a cell he defied me to do it. He said that if I locked him up he would go to the President of the United States and make me all kinds of trouble. He said President Harding was a great chum of his."

Mrs. Bowser laughed and the police sergeant went on:

"He finally started to walk off and we had to detain him. In the row I think he got hit with a club, but there is no great damage done. It cooled him off somewhat, but it took three of us to put him in a cell. We would have let him go if he had explained the case, but he would not listen to us. Now he will have to appear in court tomorrow morning to answer the charge of misdemeanor. I don't think it will do any hurt to keep him in the cell all night. If you want to bail him out you must bring the deed of your property."

"But I can't do that," answered Mrs. Bowser. "Mr. Bowser has the deed in safe deposit."
 "Then can you raise two hundred and fifty dollars in cash?"
 "I fear not, as we have got but $5 in the house."
 "And Mr. Bowser hasn't got but $10 on him. Unless you have some friend to interfere in your behalf, he will have to pass the night in a cell. You might come down and talk the matter over with him."
 "Yes, I will come."
 Mrs. Bowser went down to the station. She was fifteen minutes late. They would have shown her every courtesy, but Mr. Bowser had taken advantage of those fifteen minutes to raise another row. He had banged on the door of his cell, and indulged in about fifty awful threats. Therefore they were about ready to drench him down with cold water played through a hose. Mrs. Bowser was only allowed to talk to him through the door. She spoke about getting Mrs. Green or some one else to bail him out, but he almost ferociously replied:

"I forbid you to do anything of the kind! I want to have a perfect suit for a million dollars' damages against these hounds of police! I am in here, and here I will stay until I am brought into court in the morning. I know the judge. He will give them an awful raking down, and then I will begin my suit. If it is necessary, the President himself will come down here as one of my witnesses!"

"But the President knows nothing about the case!" protested Mrs. Bowser.

"It don't make any difference. I tell you, Mrs. Bowser, they have got hold of the wrong man! They never knew who Samuel J. Bowser was, but they will know it after this! The detective scratched my nose in reaching for my collar. They will have to pay me a hundred thousand dollars for that scratch. Then he tore my coat collar, as you see. That is another hundred thousand. Then, because I wouldn't stop talking, they hit me with a club, and the brutes shoved me into the cell. Oh, but won't I give them such a lawsuit as never was heard of before!"

"Then I can't get you out," said Mrs. Bowser.

"No, ma'am you can't, but you must not worry. I will be home about nine o'clock, headed by a brass band. You can arrange about the band, if you want to."

Mr. Bowser was rather quiet all night long. That is, he didn't protest and threaten only once every fifteen minutes. He was brought out of his cell when court opened. He smiled at the judge, but there was no returned smile. The officer told how he saw the boy stealing and he said there was a scuffle, because the boy tried to bite his hand. He told of Mr. Bowser's interference, and then Mr. Bowser himself was called to stand up. All he said was:

"He was using the boy in a brutal manner, and I felt called upon to interfere."

"Oh, you did, eh?" remarked the judge. "You are fined $50, or thirty days in jail!"

There were friends of Mr. Bowser there who lent him the money, and he paid the fine and started for home. When he reached it he had something to say to Mrs. Bowser, and it was:

"I will also sue the judge for a million dollars' damage! Get some breakfast ready for me!"

Cadmium Found in Zinc Ores.
 Cadmium, a metallic element discovered in 1817 by Stromeyer, is not found native, but occurs as the sulphide in the mineral greenockite, and in association with zinc ores. Greenockite is found in Bohemia and in Hungary, and also in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, but in too small quantities to be of commercial importance. Cadmium is a constituent of most zinc ores, and as it is more volatile than zinc it passes over first, in the reduction of such ores, as cadmium oxide. This is collected, mixed with charcoal, and the mixture heated in iron tubes, from which the cadmium distills over in a more or less impure state. In order to purify it, the metal is redistilled and the product dissolved in hydrochloric acid, from which solution metallic cadmium is precipitated with zinc. Most of the cadmium of commerce comes from Silesia, but small quantities are produced in the Jolm (Mo.) district.

First Practical Reaper.
 Cyrus H. McCormick made the first successful reaper. He built it as a boy without his father's knowing it and tried it out one fall. It was not entirely a success, but he made some changes and tried it again. Finally in 1831 he made his first successful reaper, says Farm and Fireside. He kept on making improvements and in 1834 had a machine good enough to patent. He offered them for sale for $30 apiece, but no one would buy. Finally in 1839 he invited a lot of farmers to see it work. It cut two acres an hour. That was really wonderful in those days, but still no one would buy it. The next year 1840 he went to Egypt, Va., bought the patent machine and paid $80 for it. It was a failure in the new invent-
