Fruit of the Tree

Probably there is no building material more universally used than lumber. As a fruit of the trees of this earth, the building material which shelters us ranks with the food that nourishes us.

Like all fruit, some is good for one purpose. Another kind is needed for a different purpose. It must be cared for. It must be used in the right way.

Lumber Our Specialty

Our business is the buying of lumber in large quantities in order to serve those of you who wish to use it. It is our business to know what kinds are the best for every purpose. It is our business to care for it to the best of our ability while it passes from tree to you.

Most of all it is our duty to see that you get the lumber best suited to your needs at a price that is fair. We are trying to live up to these ideals in daily practice. Come to us for

WON HIGHEST HONORS IN HADES

Through an underground (although not an underground) channel I have learned of a contest that took place recently in Hell. The object of the contest as stated by the Devil himself, was to enable him to ascertain who among his evil cohorts was best fitted to occupy the next highest office in the realm of Hell.

The contestants were given a term of years in which to perform the most diabolical deed each could devise, obtain authenticated proof of its actual performance and to present all evidence at a public meeting held for that purpose. Under his seal the Devil obligated himself to reward the one winning the contest by making that one his Deputy, give him power to reign with absolute authority during the Devil's indisposition or absence on vacation and to present him with a scepter second only in fearfulness to that of the Devil himself.

At the appointed time the cohorts of Hell assembled in solemn conclave and each one in the audience was in breathless expectation to learn what the Devil (who had announced previously that he was to be the sole judge in the contest) would consider the most diabolical deed.

Armed with documentary evidence in some instances filling to overflowing a lawyer's brief case, each contestant assembled on the platform and a smile of self-satisfaction overspread the countenance of the one who, at the call of the Archdemon, walked to a position in front of the Throne and recited his evil valor and misdeeds.

Without going into details of what was a most sordid recital of murder, rapine, crooked dealing, shame, degradation, dishonor and crime, it will suffice to tell of the last to present himself for the coveted honor.

When the name of "Old Trusted Subscriber" was called by the Archdemon a somewhat unfamiliar figure stepped to the front of the stage and, saluting his Majesty, began his recital. There was little about his appearance to justify an onlooker in supposing that he belonged in that motley gang of evildoers, nor did he carry much evidence of his wrongdoing. In fact, with the exception of a few letters and cards which he held conspicuously, one could not discern that he was a candidate for the honor offered by the Devil.

Given permission to speak, Old Trusted Subscriber related that he had subscribed for the local news paper a number of years ago. "At first," said he, "I paid in advance each year. Then I found out that the Editor was a pleasant sort of person, trustful and hardworking, and not disposed to press those who were indebted to him; so I began to let my subscription lapse. Every now and again there appeared a notice in the paper to pay up, with a mild threat that back accounts would be placed in the hands of a lawyer for collection. As a sort of sop I went to the office and paid for a year on my indebtedness, but never paid up in full, not to mention paying in advance. Then I made inquiry and found that those who did not 'scare' at the threat to take legal action were not molested or troubled, so I decided I need not settle, either.

"In the meantime, I got all the personal mention and publicity I wanted. Whenever we gave a party or had friends visiting at our house the Editor always published a note of it. Whenever death came into the family or one of my children got married, I always wrote out a long account in which I praised myself as being a representative citizen of the community and the Editor always published it in full. Whenever one of my boys or girls went off to school the Editor mentioned it; when they got high marks or won distinction the Editor printed an account of it and I figure that I got twice the value of the subscription price each year; but, year by year, I got further and further behind with my payments.

"Then I moved away from town, but as I wanted to know of the doings in my old town, and knowing full well that the home paper would chronicle all of these doings, as well as publish anything I might send in from my new home so that my friends might hear from me without the trouble of writing to them, I ordered the paper sent to my new address. The Editor 'fell' for this imposition and even wrote out, without any suggestion from me, a eulogistic item about my value to the community and the loss the community would feel at my going. But this did not induce me to pay up before leaving.

"When my paper was five years in arrears I received a bill from the Editor but paid no attention to it. Here is the first, second, third, and fourth bill I received. Here, also, is a notice from a lawyer and another from a collection agency asking me to pay what I justly owe the paper. Here, too, is evidence to the effect that I ordered my Postmaster to send notices, at three different times, advising the Editor that I refused the paper; and here—

"Enough! Enough!" cried his Majesty, not a little elated at the gruesome recital. "This is the most diabolical deed that ever mortal could perform!

"Vest this demon with the robe of office; elevate him to a place on the Throne second only to mine; place in his hand the scepter of authority! Bow the knee to the Deputy Devil!"
