This is an unusually large family for the swine breed and Mr. Nicholson, who has made farming a life business, says he never heard of such a thing before.

A $30,000 OIL CAN

For years, until recently, Columbia university had an "oil can" worth $30,000 a year. It is made known in the following statement to the alumni by President Nicholas Murray Butler. "The most useful gifts, whether large or small are those to be expended as the judgment of the trustees may dictate. For a number of years a personal friend of mine, now dead, brought me each March his check for $30,000 and gave it with but two conditions: First, that no one should ever know his name, and, second, that the gift should be expended in ways which I thought necessary to increase the usefulness of the university. This gift came to be known as the President's Oil Can, and many were the rough places that it smoothed over, and the creaky joints that it made to run noiselessly. Since the death of that gracious and generous benefactor we have keenly felt the lack of capacity to do just the sort of thing which his gift made possible."

The new dictionaries say that "tlatin" is pronounced with the accent on the "tam." Now if we've got to learn that word all over again, we're going to get something else to talk about, or else go back to the old-fashioned "calories."

The inventors have fixed it so that people can get from place to place rapidly, and that problem is settled for all time. They have also fixed it so that a good many people won't stay in one place long enough to make a living.

A dispatch from London says Europe is planning to finance itself without American aid, and if this means that they are going to pay up their overdue indebtedness to this country nobody over here will object.

ANOTHER BIRTHDAY.

Calvert, May 21, 1922.
Editor Brevard News:

I wish to say through the News to my friends, that Sunday, the fourth of June will be my 92nd birthday. God has permitted me to live a long, laborious, and I trust useful life, and a birthday present will be thankfully received and appreciated in my old age and great affliction—am almost helpless.

Sincerely,
F. M. JORDAN.

Pay Rent To Yourself.

This institution is in a position to give you the service that will meet your individual requirements, whether you want to own a home or lay aside a portion of your income for financial betterment.

Don't forget that while you are paying for a home under our plan, you are living in it and saving the rent money. If you had to pay the rent it would amount to almost as much as your payments of principal and interest. Instead of rent receipts, why not a deed to the property?

If you want to secure a home and have not the required per cent of cash necessary for your part, subscribe for a few shares of installment stock and save a few dollars systematically each week or month. Enough will soon be accumulated to justify the association in advancing the balance for you to buy or build.

We have $10,000 available just now to help our patrons build or buy a new home.
