BREVARD NEWS PRICES LOWER THAN BIG CITIES

Mr. A. E. Hampton, always a strong believer in home industries and strong in his local pride of Brevard's business enterprises, was in the market recently for some job printing and wrote to two different printing houses of national reputation for their prices after getting the News prices. Mr. Hampton found that our prices were less in both instances and asks that we publish this fact through the columns of the News. We appreciate Mr. Hampton's kind and friendly interest and can only return the compliment by mentioning the fact that the people of this community realize his general ever-ready-to-help attitude even though it takes hard cash, in all matters pertaining to the upbuilding of our community. Alf in an A. No. 1 merchant and has built up one of the best Gent's furnishing stores in Western North Carolina.

CLEAN UP THE SCHOOLS

It is not necessary to dwell here on the necessity of beautifying the graded school grounds and building a sidewalk, crowning the road, etc. Now is the time to get busy. The town expects to build the walk and do its part. Let the school committee or whoever is responsible do their part. The fountain, while a splendid addition to the school should not be left running during the holidays. Any children caught turning it on should be chastized.

CITIZENS TELEPHONE COMPANY ELECT OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Citizens Telephone Company, the following officers and directors were elected:

J. S. Bromfield, president and general manager; Fred Johnson, vice-president; O. L. Erwin; W. M. Henry; H. C. Ranson; Dr. T. J. Summey; C. C. Yongue, who appointed G. E. Lathrop secretary and treasurer.

Over 200 phones are now in operation on the most modern and up-to-date local exchange in the State.

While a fair net profit on the present business was shown, it was not thought best to declare a dividend at this time, as there was a continual demand for additional equipment for the increasing business. Five operators are now necessary to handle the calls, where two were needed a year ago. Fully realizing that the present success of the new system is largely due to the time, energy and attention that the president has given to the business, absolutely without remuneration, a unanimous vote of thanks was given Mr. Bromfield as at least showing the company's appreciation of his untiring efforts in its behalf. The News wishes to congratulate the stockholders and citizens of Brevard on the splendid showing made by the new phone system.

BREVARD CLUB MEETING

A meeting of the Brevard Club has been called for Tuesday night, June 13, for the regular monthly business meeting.

KEEPING BREVARD CLEAN

At last there is a movement to clean up and keep clean Brevard all the year around. Drays will be supplied to carry off the trash by the town and the citizens can now make no piles of trash, call the right authority and get rid of it free of cost.

DR. HUNT DESIGNS FOLDER

Dr. C. W. Hunt has designed and edited a very interesting and boosting folder which we were pleased to print for the good of the cause.

In another column we print it in full and suggest that those interested cut it out, paste on cardboard for future reference.

CAN YOU GET IT?

Someone has suggested that the Democratic primary reminded him of the fall of Rome at the battle of Waterloo. We presume he meant that Nero's fiddle was playing out.

The Primary is over, shake hands and go to work.

AN APPRECIATED COMMUNICATION FROM PROF. TROWBRIDGE

Mr. William A. Band, Brevard, North Carolina
My dear Mr. Band:
I write to thank you very cordially for the large amount of space you gave to Brevard Institute in a recent issue of your valued paper. It shows the booster spirit which is so marked a characteristic of your general attitude, and I hope it will be an example to all of us to induce more co-operation in our community. Again thanking you, I am
Very truly yours,
C. H. TROWBRIDGE

PROFESSOR TROWBRIDGE PRAISES BREVARD

Editor of the Brevard News:
After a year's leave of absence, he writer returned to Brevard last fall to resume his duties in Brevard Institute. It was a very great pleasure to observe the development which had occurred under Mr. Orr's administration and the continued interest and co-operation of the community in the efforts of the Institute to provide a practical education at low rates. More than seven thousand dollars had been subscribed by people of all denominations for the construction of the new dormitory; such purchases as had been made were made at reasonable prices; friends on every hand were glad to help in every need.

Since that time the same kindly spirit has constantly been manifest. Merchants have sold their goods without unreasonable profits; people in the county have let us have produce and have sold stock at prices satisfactory to them and to us; the local contractors for the new building have underbid all others; the Betterment Association has continued to give our students low rates for their entertainments; the moving picture houses have been strict in their censorship of their own pictures recommended for our use; the churches have welcomed us and provided their best seats for us at all times and the pastors have been generous of their time at our chapel exercises; the county paper has given us space and advice and help of all kinds with our press-room; and from every side have come evidences of the interest of Transylvania in education and of a determination to help the schools in every way.

It is a very great delight to get back into this kind of atmosphere. I only regret that it is impossible to enumerate all the kindnesses in this space. Those who have extended courtesies may be sure that no one of them all has been unappreciated or forgotten. We trust that the institution may be able to show its gratitude by its increasing value to the town and county.
C. H. TROWBRIDGE

PARTY FEALTY

Why are you a Republican? Or why a Democrat. It would be interesting to learn of the reason of the party affiliation of the individual, and to learn how much of party history he may know. That most men inherit their party allegiance is patent, and that bigotry has more to do with party prejudice than judgment, cannot be denied.

Party names are no indication of continuous party sentiment. The Bourbon Democrat can trace his party ancestry further into the past than can his political rival. Yet if he goes back far enough he will find himself classed by the detested rival name. For when, after the political rivalry of Jefferson and the elder Adams, party conventions succeeded congressional caucuses, the followers of Jefferson called themselves Republicans, while the Hamiltonians were Federalists.

Madison, "Father of the Constitution," was a Republican of the stripe of Jefferson, yet he was the projector of the protective principle in the tariff on imports, while the modern Democrat is in theory a Free Trader, except that he has not the courage to say so, and suggests the tariff is justified only as a revenue producer.

The name Democrat was applied to the Republicans in derision by the aristocratic Federalists. Since 1865 the principal political organizations have been known by their present names, but in character both have changed. Could Lincoln visit us today he would have difficulty in recognizing as his own party that has wandered so far from his teachings. And who would think of making the polices of Cleveland tally with those of Jefferson?

Jefferson, the Democrat, was the first public advocate of the abolition of Negro slavery. Lincoln gained immortality by achieving it. Madison, the Democrat, fathered the protective tariff principle, and while it is inconceivable that he would have supported it as it is in present practice, the idea has been a vital tenet in the theory of government of the latter-day Republicanism.

The student of political history must be aware of these facts, and the student of political history is becoming cynical regarding the reasons for party affiliation on the part of the masses. There are explanations of the situation other than mere inherited fealty, but they are hardly complementary to the ideal of American citizenship.

Advertising signs in the national forests of California must come down. Advertisements printed on trees and rocks are also to be effaced. Such advertising is prohibited in all national forests without special permits, which are seldom issued. Unrightly signs and billboards deface the mountain landscapes of our national forests.

There were many candidates defeated last Saturday, but not for always. Each defeated candidate has made many more friends by the manner in which they have lined up with the people's choice for the grand fight against the common enemy.

HARMONY AMONG THE DEMOCRATS

According to an Asheville paper an article appeared in which it was claimed that the throwing out of 56 votes by the county board of elections in the State senatorial race, had caused a political rumpus in Brevard, that threatens the party harmony of Transylvania Democrats.

This report is greatly exaggerated. While it was found necessary on account of irregularities for the canvassing board to delay their decision until Wednesday, June 14, in order to make a thorough investigation.

The Democrats are thoroughly in harmony. The candidates themselves are the greatest of friends and the controversy, if any, is practically settled.

It is rumored around about town that there is a great split among the Democrats on account of the senatorial race, etc. This is only another attempt to throw the Democratic party into disrepute, etc. The race for the senate can have absolutely no influence on the outcome of the fall county election as it is a state office, and the nomination is equivalent to an election. The three counties involved rotate in nominating the candidate by a gentleman's agreement.

It reminds one of that old gag about the Irishman who was beating up his wife; the stranger attempted to take her part and was whipped for his pains by the wife.

Transylvania "The Land of Waterfalls."

The primary of last Saturday was remarkable for the utter lack of any signs of booze. Not a drink could be had, not even a smell, and the Mayor's blotter shows a clean record.

Quite a number of strangers are in our midst and the beginning of our tourist season is here.

CUNNING—FETZER

Coming as a complete but delightful surprise to their many friends was the announcement of the marriage of Capt. Wm. Fetzer to Mrs. Dorothy Roland Cunning of New York and Anderson, S. C., which took place on June 4 in Asheville, N. C.

The Rev. Campbell of Asheville officiating, the happy couple are now residing at Camp Sapphire preparatory to the opening of the Camp which will be July 1.

DIDN'T SAVE

Willie Sims, once a famous jockey recently told his story to a New York magistrate:

"It was a poor year when I did not clear $20,000. Now I'm forty-one years old. That's old age for a jockey. I don't seem to be any good at anything else and I am down and out. Send me to jail, judge, or any place where I can get something to eat. I don't know how to steal; I can not beg, and I am starving.

Sims could have saved over $75,000 during his career as a jockey. If he had invested his earnings he would have now been on easy street—living on the interest of his money. He never saved—he never had a savings account in a good, strong bank like this one. It's a pathetic story of Sims, but there are many in this world like him.
