EASTWARD HO!

N. E. A. The Boston Meeting of the National Education Association. Yes, we attended that great meeting in that great city of Boston.

The sessions of the great educational meeting were held in that great Mechanics Hall of Boston, covering one block. All the general sessions were held there and the programs were profusely rich with the best talent of the nation.

The general theme of the general program was "Education and the Democratic Awakening." This Democratic Awakening was emphasized in "The Professional Training for Teachers," "Improvement of Rural Life," etc.

It is not my purpose to consume space in your valuable paper to even give a hint of the many good things the program provided, nor to speak of the great social features of the meeting, and the hospitality extended to the visitors from every state in the union, by the Boston people.

As great as was the meeting in its educational bearing upon the nation, none the less great was the opportunity of enjoying the many sights of historical interest in and around Boston.

Many excursions were made to Lexington, Concord, Salem, and Plymouth, besides the many places of interest in the city of Boston itself; and ones knowledge of history and literature was made richer by such visits. We shall always cherish pleasant memories of our visit.

BEGGARS REAP HARVEST IN N. Y.

Professional Panhandlers Have Palatial Country Homes.

ONE PICKED UP $60 AN HOUR

Roy P. Gates, Executive of the Joint Application Bureau of the Charity Organization Society, Declares He Knows of One Mendicant Who Has Good Home in Suburbs and Keeps "Profession" a Secret.

Jobs in general may be scarcer than usual, but the wily-minded beggars who "work" New York are reported to be doing so well that their profession is taking in recruits at an unparalleled rate.

One gentleman who nightly pours hard-learned stories into the ears of passers-by is said to own a country place, kept up by the cash his appeals bring in. Another professional panhandler is credited with having one of the best-stocked liquor cellars in New York. These, of course, are professional men who have made a profound study of the business of getting something for nothing.

The man who is actually suffering from hunger, or is facing the prospects of "carrying the banner" all night for the lack of the price of a bed, cannot tell so convincing a story as a gentleman who lives in the country and has his money in the bank. Especially in the Times square district, according to reports issued by the New York Joint application bureau of the Charity Organization society and by the Federation of Jewish Charities, professional beggary has increased until it is carried on today on a greater scale than ever before.

Pick Up $60 an Hour.

It is perfectly easy for an active beggar or panhandler to earn $5 an hour or more, whereas earnings up to $60 an hour have been reported, according to Roy P. Gates, the executive of the joint application bureau, who is considered to be the greatest authority on "panhandling" in this country.

To test begging conditions and to estimate the number of professionals at work, Mr. Gates frequently does a little "panhandling" himself. At a recent experiment at Herald Square he collected $3.32 in 40 minutes. Conditions are nearly the same in other big cities, according to Mr. Gates, who on a visit to Boston "panhandled" for an hour on one corner and picked up $5.31.

Beggar Has Country Home.

"I know one professional who has a good home in the country and commutes daily," said Mr. Gates. "I do not believe that his business is known where he lives. After trying out many occupations he found begging the most profitable and stuck to it. I am not sufficiently in his confidence to know just what his methods are, but I think he makes changes in his clothes in the morning when he arrives here and before he returns to his country home, where he is apparently regarded as a solid and substantial citizen."

"I know a one-legged beggar who works the South ferry district who has one of the best-stocked liquor cellars in New York."

"Victims" of Disasters.

Times Square now harbors the elite of the mendicants of the East, who have applied modern publicity methods to their professions. Most of them got out of the hospital after being in some disaster which has figured largely in the news.

"The great amount of begging today is due, of course, to widespread unemployment. During times when there was plenty of employment the beggar was unpopular."

"The case of the blind is somewhat different, because few can do any real work. A very large percentage of the blind beggars turn out to have pretty good eyesight when they are investigated. The case is also different, of course, with those hopelessly crippled. Of the crippled beggars very few are World war veterans, though a number wear pants of military uniforms."

Holds World's Record.

The world's record for fast begging is believed to be held by Thomas Campbell, who lost an arm in a railroad accident and raided Times Square crowds in khaki and a soldier's hat, with a row of medals across his breast. He was arrested and found weighted with several pounds of pennies, nickels and shavers and a sheaf of bills. He confessed he had made $60 in one hour. Campbell's methods were unique. He went through a Times Square crowd as a crack half-back goes through an open field, thrusting the stump of an arm into face after face, holding his other hand open and exclaiming:

"You understand. Come across!"

His one good hand was hardly fast enough to take in the money thrust at him.

Youngster Gang Robbed Slot Machines.

A youngster gang that carried on a profitable business in robbing chewing gum slot machines was discovered in New York City, with the arrest of Herman Scholnick and Benjamin Klossky. Herman is the leader of the gang and Benjamin is a recruit, it is charged. The former carried 2,200 pennies while his apprentice filled his pockets with about 600.

MUD VOLCANOES NEAR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Bulletin Issued by National Geographic Society Explains Just What They Are.

Recent eruption of mud volcanoes in the edge of Mexico near the southern California line as reported from El Centro, California, has introduced these "little brothers of Vesuvius" to some persons for the first time, and may have left the impression that this portion of the country is subject to major volcanic outbreaks. A bulletin issued from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society explains just what mud volcanoes are and tells something of their wide distribution around the world.

"The term 'volcano' is in a way a misnomer for these little mounds of boiling mud—a fact that is recognized sometimes by calling them 'mud geysers,'" says the bulletin. "Most of them, in the matter of size, bear to true volcanoes the relation of the proverbial molehill to the mountain. And while 'volcano,' with the picture that it brings up of demolished and buried cities, naturally inspires something of awe, 'mud volcanoes,' when they are not mildly interesting natural phenomena, are little more than nuisances."

"Like geysers, mud volcanoes are usually found in regions that have been subject to true volcanic action within recent geologic times. But this is not always true; and recent in this sense may mean many thousands of years. In the case of geysers, water gathers in fissures, a portion of whose walls are hot, steam forms after a time and the column of water is expelled. In the case of mud volcanoes, a much smaller quantity of water is involved. It is usually turned completely into steam which forces its way through fine material and forms hot mud. In typical mud volcanoes, the soft mud is forced out with little violence through the top of a small mound and flows down over the sides. Occasionally, however, a heavy column of mud traps the steam for a considerable period, which is ended by a geyser-like eruption that may throw the soft material and chunks of the hardened cone high in the air."

"Mud volcanoes are much more common than geysers. The only places in which geysers exist in appreciable numbers are the Yellowstone National Park—the largest and most important geyser region in the world—Iceland, the Malay archipelago, and the North Island of New Zealand. But mud volcanoes are scattered around the world. To the eastward they are first encountered in Iceland. In Europe they are found in Sicily, the mainland of Italy and the Russian Crimea; in Asia they occur at Baku, on islands in the Bay of Bengal and on the Malay Archipelago; farther East they are found in New Zealand. In the Western Hemisphere they are found in Colombia, in the Yellowstone Park, just south of the Mexican-California line in the delta of the Colorado river, and a few miles to the north of the eastern shore of the Salton sea, in the Imperial valley."
