LOOK TO COMMUNITY'S NEEDS

What Has Been Accomplished at Fort Scott, Kansas, May Be Cited as Case in Point.

Half a dozen years ago there were two years when the wheat around Fort Scott did not come to harvest and, as wheat was the only product of the community the town was left flat. Even the merchants closed their stores and moved away.

The chamber of commerce decided that the community needed more diversity of production. It studied the situation and decided that the dairy industry would fit logically into its scheme. The farmers owned only scrub cattle, but despite this the chamber went down to Kansas City and induced the big milk users to establish three shipping stations in the Fort territory. The farmers were much surprised to find that they could get money for milk which formerly had been used only as swill for hogs.

Then the chamber of commerce took its second step. It organized an excursion and took forty of its most progressive farmers to that part of Wisconsin where the dairy industry is most highly developed. It showed them just what first-class dairy farms and first-class dairy cattle were and how such an enterprise is properly operated.

But the chamber did not stop here. It raised enough money to buy a trainload of the best milk cows it could find in the United States, had them shipped to Fort Scott and sold to the farmers at cost, which was less than the price they would have had to pay if they had bought individually. Last year this community sold half a million dollars' worth of milk alone. That wealth would not have come to Fort Scott but for the sale of milk. It will be spent among the business people who make up its chamber of commerce. The country roundabout has just completed the laying of 225 miles of improved roads, a thing that the farmers had formerly refused to finance. The whole community is transforming itself. All of which comes of taking thought of community needs and proceeding to supply them.

KEEP THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

Annual Clean-Ups All Right in Their Way, but There is a Very Much Better Method.

The annual spring clean-up in Kansas City has become a well known event. But why should it be an event? Why not a continuous process?

Recently an excellent method of keeping the streets always in repair has been put into operation. Why can't something of this kind be made to apply to the cleaning not only of streets but of yards, lots and other places that demand attention? There is provision for street cleaning, of course. But the street-cleaning forces do not receive the encouragement and help they ought to have. Their work often is nullified or made difficult by the carelessness of individuals who throw papers and various kinds of refuse where they will be most unsightly and generally objectionable.

Keeping a city beautiful and clean all the year around does not stop with the operation of a city department. It becomes a part of the civic duty of every individual; it must be checked up to every home as well as to a health or street cleaning department. It may become a matter of habit with the people. It should be prompted by pride; a regard for the rights of neighbors; for what visitors may think of the city; for the best things in respect to appearance and public health.—Kansas City Star.

Stimulating Home Ownership.

One of the chief ways in which home ownership can be stimulated is through the education of the general public. Of late years it has become apparent to the leaders in the real estate profession that many people have not purchased their homes, not through inability or unwillingness, but simply because of their lack of knowledge. They fear that perhaps they might find themselves engaged in a venture about which they know nothing, and hence it does not appeal to their conservatism. The one best method of educating the public is by visualizing the processes involved in the acquisition of a home and home site. This is best done by having representative men in the industries allied to home construction brought together at an exposition to show people at first hand what has been done and what may be accomplished in the future and to give them authoritative information and definite costs.

Culture.

"Don't talk to me about colleges!" scoffed the self-made man. "Look at me! Do you suppose I would have been any more successful than I am if I had a college education?" "No," admitted the professor, "but you might have been less inclined to brag about it."—Judge.

CARGOES THAT SAILORS FEAR

Either Sugar, Coffee, or Cotton Are Considered Far More Dangerous Than Dynamite.

At first thought it would seem that dynamite was a cargo to be carefully avoided, but from a sailor's point of view there are far more dangerous cargoes. He dreads, for instance, a cargo of sugar. Put hundreds of tons of cane sugar in casks in the hold of a vessel and let the ship steam through a spell of hot weather. The odor is sickening. The sailors cannot get the sweet taste out of their mouths, and crave vinegar or lemon juice—anything sour. They lose their appetites and are always glad when a voyage on which the cargo was sugar is over. Coffee is as disagreeable as sugar, in addition to being very dangerous.

Cotton is a really dangerous cargo. If a little oil happens to touch raw cotton the result is spontaneous combustion. A single bale of cotton saturated with such an oil as boiled linseed and lying at the bottom of the hold can be compared only to a slow match attached to a bomb.

Acids and other chemicals form dangerous cargoes. Carbide of calcium, for example, is more dangerous than dynamite. Acetylene gas is made from this chemical, and the gas is constantly given off if the product is exposed to air.

REFLECTION IN ONE'S TRUST

Belief in Another's Goodness Well Explained as the Sympathetic Affection of Our Own.

Trust is the belief in another's goodness on the inspiration of your own. The moment you ask for other grounds than this, and withhold your reliance till it can rest on external proof, you cease to trust and stipulate for knowledge. On the other hand, if the confiding temper is so dominant as to blind you to opposing evidence and refuse the correction of positive experience, it becomes a weak credulity. In both extremes the pure soul breaks with the clear intellect, becoming its slave in the one case, and its tyrant in the other. The genuine sphere of trust is found in neutral instances, where outward proof is absent or in equipoise, and the presumptions of right affection have the undisputed field to themselves. And even then, it is not a mere arbitrary hypothesis, pleasantly flung across the gap of ignorance to veil it with a curtain of painted cloud; not a mere willingness to live in a happy delusion till the rough winds of reality shall dissipate it; but rather, the quick insight by which the pure heart recognizes purity, and love catches the eye of love. So that, in its true exercise, trust is the intuitive apprehension of another's goodness by the sympathetic affection of our own.—James Martineau.

The Helpful Caddy.

At one of the New England golf clubs a young lady who is very popular with her caddies arranged a match with an old woman who is proud of her mediocre ability. The young lady, a good player, wished to lose the game out of courtesy and for social reasons. Her opponent was in even worse form than usual and the girl grew desperate. She seemed unable to prevent her opponent from losing. Finally she told her caddy that she would like to lose the match. "Ah, miss," he muttered, "I didn't know that. Here I've been stamping on her ball every time it gets in the long grass."

Butterflies Eye-Spots.

What do the eye-spots on butterflies' wings mean? The naturalists say, frankly, "We do not know." It is thought that these eye-spots may have some utilitarian application. They form one of the most intricate of all natural designs. The fact that butterflies have been captured with their eye-spots pierced, as if from the attack of birds, has been used as an argument in favor of the view that they must be "protective markings," imitating eyes because birds strike at the eyes of their victims. But this suggestion is hardly regarded as satisfactory. Among butterflies the most striking examples of eye-spots are found on the under surface of the wings.

Long Period of Mourning.

Mourning fashions in some of the foreign quarters go to lengths that to the average American seem unreasonable. For instance, in the Sicilian quarters, when the father of a family dies, his wife and daughters are expected to dress in mourning indefinitely. No matter how young a girl is, she is expected to wear dead black all through her girlhood until she is engaged to be married. Of course, the rule is not closely observed, but no girl breaks it, even with the consent of her mother, without coming in for some criticism. Three years of wearing mourning are quite usual.—New York Sun.

Immense Production.

Some idea of the productivity of the volcanic soil of Hawaii may be had when it is stated that while there are only 100,310 acres devoted to sugar cane, the annual average production of this area is 540,248 tons of sugar, while Cuba with a cane acreage of approximately 1,500,000 acres in harvest annually produces a yearly average of 3,500,000 tons of sugar. It is claimed that in no part of the world are such improved and intensive cultural methods used as in Hawaii.

A DAY'S WORK DONE

Do the EYES feel more played-out than the BODY when your days' work is done?

Can you read your evening paper without squinting, without becoming sleepy, or having your eyes burn?

If you are acquiring the habit of dropping off to sleep, over your newspaper, it is a sign that the eyes are tired, and demanding rest. It is evidence that the daily routine is getting to be TOO Much for them.

This condition is unnatural, and unless corrected, will seriously injure the delicate nerves and muscles of the eyes.

The thing to do, is to consult a RELIABLE OPTOMETRIST — one in whom you can place confidence. The right scientific attention will bring your vision up to normal.
