B. Y. P. U. MEETS DEC. 31 AT MT. MORIAH:

The Transylvania B. Y. P. U. Association will meet with Mt. Moriah church the fifth Sunday in December at 10 o'clock instead of the first Sunday in January.

As this meeting will close our work for the present year and formulate our plans for the ensuing year, it is earnestly hoped that every Union in the county will endeavor to send as many representatives as possible. The B. Y. P. U. work in this association is just in its infancy and it is struggling hard for existence, yet we trust that it is God's ordained means for the development of our young men and women into more effective workers in the cause of righteousness. We trust that all pastors and church officers will lend us all the encouragement possible.

The entertaining church will furnish dinner on the ground and the following program will be carried out:

1. "Loyalty," by House.

2. Bible reading and prayer, Pearl Bracken.
3. What effect will our young people's work have on the next generation, by President.
4. How can we as young people improve our social conditions, Roy DeLong.
5. How can we as young people improve our spiritual conditions of our churches, Norma Chapman.
6. Sc 6, Mr. J. L. Jones.
7. What will be the plan endorsed by our young people for financing the Kingdom, J. C. McCall.
8. Address by Miss Annie Logan.
9. Quartette, Louise Townsend, Geneva Neil, Alvin Moore and Kluepelpburg.
10. Address by Judge J. J. Jentry.
11. Song.
- Dinner, 12:30.
- Reassemblance at 1:30.
1. Song by house.
2. Prayer, by Smith.
3. Quartette, Misses Nellie Lee, Ethel Holden, Messrs. Lionel Wilson and Jack Heath.
4. Address, J. L. Jones.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON:

consecrated to Him, and freely given to advance His course among men.

VI. GOD'S DIFFERENT WAYS OF GUIDING HIS OWN:

The Shepherds were led by the angels and the Wise Men were led by a star, but by these different methods they both were led to Jesus. The ignorant and untrained shepherds saw no star tho it flamed above their heads as truly as in front of the Wise Men whom it was leading. On the other hand there was never the echo of Angel's voices that reached the ears of the men of the East. But God was guiding them both.

We should not have harsh thoughts about others of God's children who are trying in different ways to do the same things that we are endeavoring to accomplish. You who are led by the angels should belittle no man's star. You who are star-led should not think that your brother who sees visions and dreams dreams in a different mission from yourself. Thank God who has given you your angels, but thank Him, too, for your brother's star. Remember that angel and star alike are the finger-posts of God, and the paths meet at last at the feet of Christ.

THE R. W. EVERETT FARM:

pearance. Roomy box stall, deeply padded with clean straw, like both sides of a broad central corridor which is floored with concrete. Air and light are found in ample quantities in all portions of the structure.

Among the first you will be shown is "Maxwalton Romper," senior two year old bull, undefeated champion of the Southern circuit.

Out in the ring is "Frons Villager," one of the largest bulls of the bred in the United States, you are informed. He stands now at 2,600 lbs.

"Engadine Revolution," another prize winning bull, is a white fellow still in the Junior yearling class.

MANY CHAMPIONS IN HERD:

Particular attention is called by your guide to "Ravendale Devergoil," which stood second, to the grand champion at Chicago as two-year-old heifer, and was sired by imported stock. "Coverleaf Mildred" is displayed as a heavy winner both as yearling and calf. "Richland Fame," sale winner in 1918 at Chicago, and "Staffanade," winner at the Carpenter and Ross 1919 Chicago sale, are also exhibited as among the leaders of a splendid herd of Shorthorns which numbers approximately fifty head.

At the upper barns, where a herd of Jersey-Guernsey cows prove excellent milkers, one sees practical demonstrations of what the results are from using fullbred sires to produce beef types. Here P. C. Orr has supervision, the dairyman being J. H. Raxter.

Thoroughbred Chester hogs, about 18 head, are being raised on the farm, and the manager estimates that there are 80 turkeys, 40 ducks, 200 hens, 10 mules and nine horses. Among the crops raised are beans, rye, corn, vegetables, red top, clover and timothy. By virtue of the stock and dairy barns the land is being constantly enriched and improved. Modern machinery is utilized in handling the large crops.

Commenting upon Engadine Farm, the "Brevard News" in a recent issue calls attention to the possibilities, as demonstrated by Mr. Everett. To quote in part: "We feel that this enterprise of Mr. Everett's should be more widely known and advertised because it is a matter which helps the entire State. There is nothing we need more than to have our beef type of cattle improved, and every bull, heifer or cow which Mr. Everett sells in North Carolina will improve our cattle, help our farmers and the beef when served on the table will be a source of pleasure to this who eat it."

"We wish that the farmers from nearby counties could come over and inspect Mr. Everett's farm and cattle, as they would not only be interested in what they see, but they would no doubt find much that would be instructive and profitable to them."

"And we feel proud that Transylvania County has a herd of Shorthorn cattle coming from a North Carolina farm which can compete with herds from other States and win the most coveted prizes."

"We have the food, the water and the climate to raise as fine beef cattle as can be raised anywhere in the world. All we need is the right breed. Let's improve our home-grown cattle so that Western North Carolina beef will have even a greater reputation than any where else."

Dr. and Mrs. J. Fred Zachary announce the birth of a daughter, Lillian Bird, December 6th, 1922.

J. M. HAMLIN ARTICLE:

heavy twine was ready for use. Instead of twine the binding was by interweaving white oak splits in the handle end; these were more lasting. The making constituted a week day business from which the maker received five cents per broom in the neighborhood market.

Thus, ending the morning routine the regular day's work is begun. It being Monday nothing is allowed to interpose — it is wash day. Grandmother is not only housewife and milk maid, she is also washerwoman for the family. If a retrospective glance could be taken there would be of service in the backyard a large gum tree of four feet in length cut from a hollow tree, tilted on a board platform and filled with ashes. Water poured in seeps through and exudes in the form of lye. Into this is heaved waste meat, skins, bones and offal saved from the last "hog-killing". This mass is boiled until chemical action forms soap. This work is done soon after "hog-killing time"; the soap is poured into kits or troughs and is always ready for the weekly laundry and daily ablutions.

The washing goes right along without let or hindrance by hand rubbing and wringing helped only by the battenstick — called by her "battiestick," for it was in a battle for cleanliness; no one need doubt the cleanliness of great-grand mothers.

Grandmother is tired; fortunate, no one expects or desires more than milk and bread, or milk and mash for supper. This simple repast being over she seats herself for an evening of rest, but the day's work is not complete. While the lower extremities rest the upper ply the knitting needles for two or three hours. She is the hosiery of the family—socks, stockings, gloves and gallowases pass through her hand stitch by stitch during long evenings oddtimes, receiving and giving calls. The burden being overtaxing the girls are taught at an early age to knit. One family in Gloucester and very probably in other sections where boys dominated made these mischievous fellows learn to knit. Why not? Grandmother's Monday's work is done; would we could promise her a respite for the days following.

When you see any of the above world known names do you not think at once of immense organization which have been built up upon many, many years of tireless endeavor and service? True success is not accomplished in a day, but by years of struggle and the building up of a name which is the synonym of value and excellence. We, Dad and Fred, are endeavoring to become connected with the best manufacturers in our country, as well as the best element in our county for we are here to stay and help develop boundless resources of our town and county, and by patient endeavor build up a name which shall mean relatively as much as the name we represent.
