Bonar Law's Policy of Hands Off in the Ruhr Sustained by Parliament—French Organize Transport There—Filibuster Against Ship Subsidy Is Effective.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DO YOU think the senatorial filibusters are serving the best interests of the American public in preventing a vote on the ship subsidy bill, or are they only playing a selfish political game?

LITHUANIA and Poland have started another little war of their own, which might conceivably disturb the so-called peace of north Europe. Already the condition is so serious that members of the council of the League of Nations believe the league will be compelled to intervene.

Therefore, when the Poles undertook to take possession of the strip in controversy, the Lithuanians immediately started hostilities, at first with "irregulars" and then with their regular army, the claim being made that the Poles were attempting to occupy territory that was incontestably Lithuanian.

On Monday the British and French warships left the harbor of Memel, carrying the French troops that had garrisoned the district for two years. The award of Memel and the adjacent district to Lithuania is regarded as a diplomatic victory for Russia over the allies.

THROUGH still contending that the French policy in the Ruhr is bad, the British government in parliament prevented the adoption of the amendment to the address on the king's speech, calling for action by the council of the League of Nations to submit the whole matter to a conference of experts in which America, it was hoped, would participate.

THE farm bloc in the house engaged in a lively contest with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon over rural credits legislation. The secretary condemned as financially unsound the Lenroot-Anderson bill proposing to establish an independent agricultural discount system, and approved the Capper bill to extend and liberalize the credit facilities of the federal reserve system for the benefit of agriculture.

and probably of Belgium and Italy, against the league. Replying to Lloyd George's appeal to "get America in at all costs to help save France from the consequences of her folly," Mr. Bonar Law said there was "no word spoken or written by any representative of the American government which suggests it is willing to intervene in quarrels in Europe."

So far the French show no signs of desiring to be "saved" by intervention. It seemed last week that one of their greatest problems, the operation of the railways in the occupied region, was about solved. Though the British declined to aid directly in this, they did surrender to the French a strip of the Cologne zone including the rail line from Dusseldorf to Troves and Metz, giving a direct outlet from the Ruhr to France.

Chairman Ben Hooper of the board said the decision was a long step toward industrial peace on the railroads. "The contentment of the employees was in harmony with the spirit of our republican institutions," he said. "Upholding the principle of majority rule in organized labor will greatly conduce to the permanency of law over force in the adjustment of industrial controversies."

THE New York house of representatives, by a vote of 78 to 64, adopted a resolution asking congress to liberalize the Volstead law, and next day the senate approved it. Under an amendment adopted the resolution must be signed by Governor Smith to be effective. The Democrats rather resented this way of "making the governor a clerk for the transmission of the memorial," but it was said Mr. Smith would comply with the requirement.

THEOPHILE DELCASSE, one of the most eminent French statesmen of this generation, died last week in Nice. He became minister of foreign affairs in 1898 and held the post eleven years in five successive cabinets. Among his great achievements was the creation of the entente cordiale between France and Great Britain. Apparently foreseeing the World war, he succeeded in forcing Italy and the central empires apart and in conciliating the opposing interests of Russia and England, thus preparing the ground for the quadruple entente.

Another notable figure passed away last week in the death of Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of the famous cavalry general of the Civil war, in her home in Washington. She succumbed to influenza. Mrs. Logan, who was eighty-six years old, never lost her active interest in public affairs.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY was made the occasion of gatherings, in Chicago and New York, of several thousands of hyphenates who hotly demanded that France be compelled to drop the Ruhr invasion. Nominally "German-American" meetings, they were addressed especially by certain "Irish-Americans" who are notorious as haters of England and lovers of Germany, and who formerly tried to induce America to fight England for Ireland's sake.

per bill to extend and liberalize the credit facilities of the federal reserve system for the benefit of agriculture. The house banking and currency committee was scheduled to report only the Capper measure, and the leaders would present the other bill on the floor of the house as an amendment.

CONTENTIONS of organized labor and the position taken by the federal railway labor board were sustained by the Supreme court in a decision in the "company union" case involving the Pennsylvania railroad. The opinion, delivered by Chief Justice Taft, held that the labor board did not exceed its powers when it condemned the methods adopted by the Pennsylvania railroad to establish employee representation in dealing with questions of wages and working conditions.

Chairman Ben Hooper of the board said the decision was a long step toward industrial peace on the railroads. "The contentment of the employees was in harmony with the spirit of our republican institutions," he said. "Upholding the principle of majority rule in organized labor will greatly conduce to the permanency of law over force in the adjustment of industrial controversies."

WISCONSIN Socialists came to the front rather startlingly last week. In the lower house of the state assembly they, in combination with the administration forces, put through a bill to abolish the Wisconsin National Guard. The measure was passed by acclamation, the opposition being negligible in numbers. It was later reported that the bill would be killed by the senate or vetoed by Governor DuSable, but this did not materially lessen the frantic joy of the Socialists, who felt they had put over something on the so-called progressives and justified their claim that the Wisconsin assembly is the most radical of all the state legislatures.

It is feared in Elson, Germany, that the British troops will be withdrawn, and the municipal authorities have petitioned the British government to allow the English soldiers to remain, so that "atrocities" may be avoided.

Prospects of the early signature of a peace treaty with Turkey have not been brightened as a result of Lord Curzon's message, delivered to Ismet Pasha at Constantinople, according to official quarters in London.

An investigation of charges made by Major General Ald-Brett Cronkhite, retired, that important official documents dealing with the death of his son, Major A. P. Cronkhite, had been tampered with, was ordered by Secretary Weeks.

The United States fine arts commission announces its approval of the full size model of the statue of a marine to be erected at Paris Island, S. C., by the marine corps. Capt. Robert Aiken of New York City, who saw service in the world war, is the sculptor.

Senator Lenroot, Republican, Wisconsin, speaking in the senate, declared that enactment of any real credits legislation, except the Capper bill, by the present congress had been rendered highly improbable as a result of Secretary Mellon's letter to Chairman McFadden of the house banking committee that the Lenroot-Anderson bill was "faulty in its larger outlines of policy." He also attacked the treasury head for his position on the measure.

The army appropriation bill, carrying $336,000,000, and last of the annual supply measures before the present congress was put in completed form when the senate without a record vote adopted the conference report as it came from the house.

The federal trade commission will proceed vigorously in its case against the Famous Players-Lasky corporation and subsidiary concerns charging unfair competition and monopolistic policies, it was announced.

The war and after-the-war tax bill of the American people was aggregated at $24,264,158,536, or more than the present total of the public debt. This is disclosed in the report of the house appropriations committee on the third deficiency appropriation bill, carrying an item of $78,675,000 for the refund taxes erroneously collected.
