

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Other Mothers

Windom, Minn.—"I was so run-down that I was just good for nothing. I was to become the mother of my ninth child, and I thought I did not have the strength to go through with it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has surely done all I could ask it to do and I am telling all my friends about it. I have a nice big baby girl and am feeling fine. You may use this letter to help other sick mothers."—Mrs. C. A. MOEDE, Box 634, Windom, Minn.

My First Child
Glen Allen, Alabama.—"I have been greatly benefited by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for bearing-down feelings and pains. I was troubled in this way for nearly four years following the birth of my first child, and at times could hardly stand on my feet. A neighbor recommended the Vegetable Compound to me after I had taken doctor's medicines without much benefit. It has relieved my pains and gives me strength. I recommend it and give you permission to use my testimonial letter."—Mrs. IDA RYE, Glen Allen, Alabama.

How Thermopylae Was Fought.
In a class of Greek history at an Indianapolis school recently, a youth was asked to tell the story of the battle of Thermopylae.

Sloan's Liniment
Reduces swelling of bruises and strains. It may be a sprained wrist or elbow—a bruised muscle—a strained tendon.

Clear Your Complexion with This Old Reliable Remedy—HANCOCK SULPHUR COMPOUND

GET RID OF THAT "TIRED FEELING"

Do you feel run down and half-sick all the time? Are you thin, pale, easily tired—no energy, no ambition, no "pep"?
Now is the time to take Gude's Pepto-Mangan. It will brace you up, give you a delightful feeling of vigor and ambition, enrich your blood, build firm, solid flesh, and bring the healthy color back to your skin.

The Blind Man's Eyes

By William MacHarg, Edwin Balmer

CHAPTER XXI—Continued.

As he struggled forward, impatient at these delays, he came several times upon narrow, unguarded roads and crossed them; at other times the little wilderness which protected him changed suddenly to a well-kept lawn where some great house with its garages and outbuildings loomed ahead, and afraid to cross these open places, he was obliged to retrace his steps and find a way round. The distance from the bridge to the place where the men he was following had got out of their motor, he had thought to be about two miles; but when he had been traveling more than an hour, he had not yet reached it. Then, suddenly he came upon the road for which he was looking; somewhere to the east along it was the place he sought. He crunched as near to the road as he dared and where he could look up and down it. This being a main road, was guarded. A motorcar with armed men in it passed him, and presently repassed, evidently patrolling the road; its lights showed him a man with a gun standing at the first bend of the road to the east. Eaton drew further back and moved parallel to the road but far enough away from it to be hidden. A quarter of a mile further he found a second man. The motorcar, evidently, was patrolling only to this point; another car was on duty beyond this. As Eaton halted, this second car approached, and was halted, backed and turned.

gone very slowly, carrying this heavy weight. They had stopped frequently to rest and had laid their burden down. Then suddenly he came to a place where plainly a longer halt had been made. The ground was trampled around this spot; when the tracks went on they were changed in character. The two men were still carrying the third—a heavy man whose weight strained them and made their feet sink in deeply where the ground was soft. But now they were not careful how they carried him, but went forward merely as though bearing a dead weight. Now, too, no more stains appeared on the brown leaves where they had passed; their burden no longer bled. Eaton, realizing what this meant, felt neither exultation nor surprise. He had known that the man they carried, though evidently alive when taken from the car, was dying. But now he watched the tracks more closely than before, looking for them to show him where the men had got rid of their burden. It was quite plain what had occurred; the wet sand below was trampled by the feet of three or four men and cut by a boot's bow. They had taken the body away with them in the boat, to sink it somewhere weighted with heavy stones in the deep water; Eaton's search was hopeless now.

or thought of him, she trusted him; she was proud of her love for him. "May I take the picture?" she asked sturdily. "Do whatever you want with it," her father answered quietly. And so she took it with her. She found a servant of whom she inquired for Avery; he had not returned so she sent for him. She went down to the deserted library and waited there with the picture of Hugh in her hand. The day had drawn to dusk. She could no longer see the picture in the fading light; she could only recall it; and now, as she recalled it, the picture itself—not her memory of her father's manner in relation to it—gave her vague discomfort. She got up suddenly, switched on the light and, holding the picture close to it, studied it. What it was in the picture that gave her this strange uneasiness quite separate and distinct from all that she had felt when she first looked at it, she could not tell; but the more she studied it, the more troubled and frightened she grew.

if, he is found, he cannot be let to live. Harry, have you never seen a picture with the numbers printed in below like that? Can't you guess yet where your father must have sent for that picture? Don't you know what those numbers mean?" "What do they mean?" "They are the figures of his number in what is called 'The Rogues' Gallery.' And they mean he has committed a crime and been tried and convicted of it; they mean in this case that he has committed a murder." "A murder?" "For which he was convicted and sentenced." "Sentenced?" "Yes; and is alive now only because before the sentence could be carried out, he escaped. That man, Phillip Eaton, is Hugh—"

CHAPTER XXII

Not Eaton—Overton.

Santoine awoke at five o'clock. The blind man felt strong and steady; he had food brought him while he was eating it; his messenger returned, Santoine saw the man alone and, when he had dismissed him, he sent for his daughter. "Bring me the picture," he said. "I must see it." "What is it you want to know, Father?" she asked. "That is the picture of Eaton?" "Yes." "I thought so." She tried to assure herself of the shade of the meaning in her father's tone; but she could not. She understood that her recognition of the picture had satisfied him in regard to something over which he had been in doubt; but whether this was to work in favor of Hugh and herself—she thought of herself now inseparably with Hugh—or whether it threatened them, she could not tell.

CHAPTER XXII

Not Eaton—Overton.

Santoine awoke at five o'clock. The blind man felt strong and steady; he had food brought him while he was eating it; his messenger returned, Santoine saw the man alone and, when he had dismissed him, he sent for his daughter. "Bring me the picture," he said. "I must see it." "What is it you want to know, Father?" she asked. "That is the picture of Eaton?" "Yes." "I thought so." She tried to assure herself of the shade of the meaning in her father's tone; but she could not. She understood that her recognition of the picture had satisfied him in regard to something over which he had been in doubt; but whether this was to work in favor of Hugh and herself—she thought of herself now inseparably with Hugh—or whether it threatened them, she could not tell.

CHAPTER XXII

Not Eaton—Overton.

Santoine awoke at five o'clock. The blind man felt strong and steady; he had food brought him while he was eating it; his messenger returned, Santoine saw the man alone and, when he had dismissed him, he sent for his daughter. "Bring me the picture," he said. "I must see it." "What is it you want to know, Father?" she asked. "That is the picture of Eaton?" "Yes." "I thought so." She tried to assure herself of the shade of the meaning in her father's tone; but she could not. She understood that her recognition of the picture had satisfied him in regard to something over which he had been in doubt; but whether this was to work in favor of Hugh and herself—she thought of herself now inseparably with Hugh—or whether it threatened them, she could not tell.

She Struggled to Free Herself From Him.

NOVAFAEX "TO MAKE NEW"

A new imported German Scientific discovery. A food tonic comprising pure beer yeast and other valuable ingredients compounded in powder form. No more yeast cakes. No more tablets. Tasteless and odorless. A pure, wholesome food for building up your vitality and preventing disease.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER COMPOUND

A safe, dependable and effective remedy for Coughs, Colds, Distemper, Influenza, Heaves and Worms among horses and mules. Absolutely harmless, and as safe for colts as it is for stallions, mares or geldings.

Vaseline CARBOLATED PETROLEUM JELLY

No skin break too small for notice. Be very wary of cuts, scratches and skin abrasions, no matter how slight.

WATCH THE BIG 4

Stomach-Kidneys-Heart-Liver. Keep the vital organs healthy by regularly taking the world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles—

LATHROP'S GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL

The National Remedy of Holland for centuries. At all druggists in three sizes. Guaranteed as represented.

PARKER'S HAIR BALMSAM

Removes dandruff, itching, restores color and beauty to gray and faded hair. Keeps the scalp cool and healthy.

HINDERCORNS

Removes Corns, Calluses, etc. Keeps all pain, restores comfort to the feet, makes walking a pleasure.

"COLD IN THE HEAD"

is an acute attack of Nasal Catarrh. Those subject to frequent "colds" are generally in a "run down" condition.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children In Use For Over 30 Years Always bears the Signature of Small vertical text on the right margin, likely containing names of publishers or agents.