This artistic dinner dress of apricot crepe romaine, with a broad silver stripe and banded with platinum fox, shows a smartly draped cape of the same material, to be worn, if desired, with the gown.

How the French Women
Arrange Their Coiffure

No matter what her style of hair-dressing may be, the French woman permits her features to show. She may draw a lock of hair out to cover her ears, but she never permits her hair to look frizzy. Almost all French women use brillantine and brush the hair back from the temples. This gives them a sleek and well-groomed appearance. The French woman also wears her hat low enough on the back of her head to take care of the stray locks, for the straggling "scolding lock" is a blemish to the otherwise smart appearing woman. She never can look well with these stray hairs at the nape of her neck.

The last word in hair-dressing shows the hair uncurled and drawn away from the ears as in opposition to the much waved and pulled coiffure which has been in vogue for several years. The psychic knot at the nape of the neck is fashionable for evening. Most hairdressers give the effect of a plain and almost precise arrangement, thus serving as a foil for handsome head-dresses.

A hair-dressing which makes a charming frame for the face shows the hair drawn back to the crown of the head, the ends curled and wound carefully around a large comb, giving the effect of smoke curling up into the air.

The increasing variety of coiffures accounts for the vast number of hair ornaments now being shown. It would seem that every conceivable type of hair ornament of all ages has been revived or used as a basis for some newer design.

Fur Coats Are to Be Slimmer Next Season

Fur coats will be slim next year, if we are to believe what designers say.

This season's coats and capes have been rather voluminous, falling in full lines from shoulder to hem. The present French styles, however, are far more slender in silhouette than ours and we will undoubtedly be following their lines next season.

Already importers are showing advance models based upon French imports with long, slender lines. It is presumed that the long skirt vogue will continue throughout the coming year, hence advance models all concentrate on the 51-inch length, with a decided tendency toward the narrow ankle line. In some cases the ankle line is so scant that inside straps and under linings are provided to make walking more comfortable.

Coats and dolmans are gaining over the cape for daytime wear. The cape with the side slits for the arms will probably remain staple for evening wear.

One-Piece Dresses in Gay, Peasant Coloring

Little one-piece dresses for children are made with embroidery at the top of the hem, around the neck and where the frock opens in front, over the shoulders and around the sleeves in gay, peasant coloring. The materials used are light colored linens. Some dresses are embroidered with round or oblong medallion designs, and when the linen is white heavy linen lace is scantily quilted around the medallions.

Fudge aprons, tea aprons and fancy work aprons all come in for their share of embroidery, and some of them are very original and attractive. One in old blue linen had oblong, embroidered motifs in white and gay colors, and around each motif a little crocheted linen lace was quilted, which gave a very foreign effect to the work.

Summer Mode.

A gown which, owing to its present popularity, will be repeated during the summer months, is the long bodiced organdie frock with the full skirt trimmed in bands of wide velvet ribbon of a shade darker than the organdie. Ribbon forms the tiny sleeves and outlines the rounded neck. In grayish blue this gown would be most attractive for summer afternoon affairs.
