YOUNG MAN

W. N. U., CHARLOTTE, NO. 4-1924.

Mr. Wright Comes Along

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(6, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) The fortune teller scanned Patty's pink palm with narrowed eyes. Then she peered intently into the great crystal ball before her.

"A lover for my lady," she said impressively.

"Oh, bother!" cried Patty, thrilled to the core.

"Perhaps he is not coming," gloomed the palmist maliciously. "Ah, I see that a pretty lady does not love himhe rides away—far away. The line in the palm and what the crystal reveals do not agree-

"Try the cards, then, Jane," broke in a tart voice behind Patty. "Get on with your fortune telling, my dear. Here is poor Patty hanging by her ears, so to speak, and waiting-"

"Ethel, you are idiotic," offered the amateur secress, forgetting pose and foreign accent. "Pretty Lady Patty, your lover is coming to you riding on a lion-there, greedy one, is not that your money's worth?" she Patty Gray tossed another half-dollar on the scarlet cloth and went out laughing. This bazaar to raise money for daily vacation schools had been a huge success, and Patty, who had worked tirelessly from the beginning, was now enjoying a little of the fun. Jane's fortune telling was always amusing—her French girl had a ready wit that added a tank of credulity to her predictions, and she sent all her clients away happy, but Patty's fortune did not please Patty herself.

"How absurd! Coming on a lion, in-deed! I don't believe there is a circus within a hundred miles!" With three or four eligible young men trailing after, not one of whom Patty cared a sixpence for, it was a pity that Jane Lamont could not have unearthed omebody out of the ordinary for one of her dearest friends.

"Perhaps she is not as mad as it sounds," thought Patty, sitting down on one of the deserted benches that overlooked the fountain and the merrygo-round. "I wonder where Dick Haben is tonight? He has acted simply horrid ever since the bachelors' dance. when Ernest monopolized me. Well, I have sent them all away for good now, and I was hoping-"

Patty sat open-mouthed, which was entirely becoming, for she was a remarkably pretty girl. Something was happening over at the merry-go-round. She hurrled over and discovered that young Laddle Smith had been trying circus stunts on the wooden horses and had bumped his head violently. Patty rendered first ald-plenty of ice and a trip home in the family car. "That is that!" she

When the little crowd had scattered Patty remained near the carrousel watching the children, and sometimes riding herself. Once she sat upon a camel and went circling and swaying around the ring trying to extract romance from the presence of the wooden camel upon which she rode.

"No use in 'preto to herself, "that I am a shelk's daughter speeding over the hot sands of the Sahara, when a glimpse over my left shoulder reveals the glimmering foun-

The shelk's daughter pursued her innocent pastime, hailed by all the children as a rare playmate, until one by one they departed for the refreshment tent, leaving Patty alone with the dying music and the slowing carrousel.

"I feel like the lonely lady that sits in the sight-seeing bus to draw customers," sighed Patty, when Henry, the owner of the carrousel, started the music off with an alluring tempo that brought a wild scramble from the refreshment tents. Now there was fun a-plenty. Patty clung to her mount and whirled dizzily : she wondered what her family would think to see her abandon herself to this child's play, when eligible young men were to be had for the acceptance thereof, for Patty had played about for a long time and her parents wanted to see her happily married. They were waiting patiently for Patty to really care for some one, because "Mr. Wright" had not yet appeared at the Gray home.

Patty yawned and turned around to see if her neighbors included any friends, because the children were leaving now and their elders were recklessly buying tickets for the merry-goround:

"Oh," cried Patty, and turned face front again, her cheeks, growing pink. Just behind her camel was a roaring lion in vain pursuit. Mounted on the lion was a man.

A man riding a lion! Yes, indeed, a young man on a wooden lion, riding with all the easy manner of a thorough horseman. A stranger, yet the most fascinating man, not too young, with hazel eyes that regarded her surprisedly, admiringly, for the brief instant she had looked around. She would not look around again-no, indeed. For what the fortune teller had said in jest was really coming true-perhaps!

Her lover was coming on a lion:
"How silly I am." thought Patty, then a sudden dizziness as the machine slowed down and stopped short. She knew she was falling from her camel, then sinking down into utter blackness of oblivion, the "shelk's daughter" fell into the arms of the lion rider.

What could be more romantic than

o | leaping from his beast had caught her in his strong arms? It was he who bore her to the first-aid tent, and reluctantly gave her into the care of the nurse in charge. "She is quite all right now, thank you," the nurse told him smilingly after he had waited about the tent for ten anxious minutes. "Miss Gray asked me to express her gratitude for your watchfulness, as it saved her from a severe fall."

"I am glad I was there, nurse," he said with his grave smile, and then hurrledly sought the fortune-teller's tent, His Cousin Jane Lamont was putting on a stiff-brimmed sailor hat and looked very smart and trig in her silk tailored suit; her black eyes were dancing.

"Jane, who is Miss Gray?" ne asker abruptly.

Jane grinned impishly, "Miss Gray Marcia, Josephine, Bertha, Harriet

"Stop at Patty, please. She sounds like Patty," he cried. "You sound like a lunatic, Bobby," she retorted, but her eyes danced. "What does she look like, dear Jane?"

"Dear Bobby, what does who look like?" she mimicked.

"You would tell my fortune," he omplained. "We needed the money," confessed

Jane cheerfully. "The means should be worthy of the cause." "Fiddlesticks! Didn't you get your noney's worth?" "So far! But why not give me nore? I am willing to pay for that,

"It will cost you $10 for the hospital and the vacation schools," she warned.

"Here is twice ten-give it to me brimming full." "I thank you! The motive behind the offering is worthy of the giver!

What do you want to know, young "Did you really mean what you said about my meeting-" "Yes; I said you would go forth upon a lion, and meet the girl you would marry." "Had you in mind the wooden lions of the carrousel?" he hesitated with a boylsh appeal in his fine eyes. "They are the only lions it is safe ride on the merry-go-round."

"You darling idiot, Jane. I met her; I was riding directly behind her—she on one of those ridiculous camels. She's wonderful, and I want to meet her, Jane! She fainted and I carried her to the tent. She sent out her thanks—name is Gray—is it Patty?"

"Who else could it be? And don't ask me where she lives, for she is staying with us for a week-and, Bobby Wright, behave yourself! Ah, here is Miss Gray now. Patty, let me present my cousin, Mr. Wright."

Patty blushed divinely and Bobby blushed the way young men in love for the first time with the one girl can blush, and that is the way Mr. Wright came along-riding on a lion, straight into Patty's heart,

WINDIEST ZONE OF NORTH HEMISPHERE

The windlest sone of the northern nemisphere embraces the northern United States and southern Canada, The windlest months are those of late autumn, winter and very early spring. August has the lowest average wind velocity, March and early April the highest. Wind is the flow of air from an area of low pressure. The greater the contrast of pressure between the masses of air over two adjacent regions, the swifter and stronger will the wind blow. Pressure differences are largely dependent upon temperature contrasts. In summer the temperature contrast between high and low latitudes is relatively small, in winter it is great, for while the snow and ice-covered North gets colder and colder, in low latitudes there is little temperature variation through the year. Therefore, the pressure gradient, to use the term of meteorology, is gentle in summer and steep in winter. The gradient may be likened to a slope of land. The air pushes down the gradient from high pressure to low, as water flows down a variable slope. The steeper the slope, the greater the velocity, whether it be air or water. Therefore, because the gradient is steeper in the cold months, the flercer are the winds. There is, however, a curious difference between the flow of a stream of water and that of the air. The water flows down the slope, the air along it, owing to the rotation of the earth on its axis.

Meaning of Word "Sib"

Until a few years ago there were probably few people outside the makers of dictionaries who had ever seen or heard the word "sib." "Yet in the rural districts of England it used to be a good enough word, a little rough and uncouth, like other short and ugly terms, but with a clear and definite meaning that no other single word had. It means a brother or a sister, or sometimes any collateral relatives of the same stock. Yet the expression never got into good society until the science of eugenics came along. The eugenists took to it right away for it filled for them a long-felt want, and in papers on eugenics it is frequently met, meaning brother or sister. Science has given it a good character and new dictionary writers will have to take from it the tag which labels it as uncouth and out of date.

The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty, the tenth turn of the screw of Omnipotence, brought Pharaoh to time and made him willing to let Israel go. The Israelites went out on their way to the promised land with a high hand. Through the land of the Philistines the journey would have been comparatively short, but God commanded them to turn from that way, lest, going through the land of the Philistines, they would be discouraged at the sight of war and desire to turn back to Egypt. The way of the wilderness was a long route, ence of war, but learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:2). The Lord went before them in a pilar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. He not only thus indicated unto them the right path, but walked with them in it. At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face something difficult. The Red sea was before them and mountains on either side. The stricken uptians had recovered from their sorrow and now saw the Israelites in a situation from which they could not extricate themselves. They raelites (Exod. 14:21, 22). They were in a straitened condition, but had no reason to fear, for the Lord had led them there. There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them into this particular place: to strengthen the faith of the people and to lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief, even censuring Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied to their murmurings by saying: "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. God said to Moses: "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." Having had His definite promise, to have prayed longer would have been unbelief. The lifting up of the rod simply served as something tangible upon which their faith could act. They were to go forward a step at a time, without raising on as to the outcome, for from the same source from which came the command came the power to obey. The presence of the Lord was adapted to their needs as they went forward. The form of the Divine presence and help is determined by His people's needs. The cloud then passed to the rear and held the enemy at bay. The presence of God had a double effect: darkness and confusion to the enemy and light and guidance to His people. As they went forward the very thing which seemed their destruction became a wall of protection on either side.

II. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (Exod. 14:28-81). Having seen the Israelites go across dryshod, Pharaoh and his people madpursued them. They insanely thought that they, in their unbelief, could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them, but took off their charlot wheels, causing them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

III. The Song of Triumph. (Exod 15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea, they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of the miraculous deliverance and overwhelming defeat. They attributed all to God. All self was left out. In a glad coming day a similar but larger congregation will sing the same song with an addition, namely, of the Lamb (Rev. 15:3).

CHENEY'S A "FIRST AID" TO MOTHERS

Old-Time Cough Remedy Can Always Be Relied on When Cold Winds Blow

Where there are children in the home mother needs a "first aid" ready at hand, because the little ones are so liable to trouble of some kind, especially when the weather is bad and cold winds are blowing. Coughs and colds are common; croup, quinsy and other affections of the throat suddenly lay hold of one or more of them; when whooping cough appears they will all have it, and you never can tell when one or the other of these children's maiadies is going to strike your family.

Therefore the wisest policy is to be forearmed so as to ward off the attack at the very first sign of its coming. Cheney's Expectorant has long been known as mother's "First Ald," for if given in time it checks the trouble and saves many hours of anxious care on mother's part, as well as unnecessary suffering on the part of the little ones.
