MAKING bread in a Bedouin tent on the deserts of Arabia is quite a different proposition from baking bread in our modern establishment--a difference the people of this community appreciate.

Our Bread

has that delicious flavor that gives it a place distinctively its own in homes where "good eating" is appreciated. The same thing is true of our pies, cakes, doughnuts and all other forms of pastry.

Quality and cleanliness are the twin mottoes of this bakery at all times.

No Complicated Scheme of Any Permanent Value in Establishing Agriculture

By CALVIN COOLIDGE, in Message to Congress.

NO COMPLICATED scheme of relief, no plan for government fixing of prices, no resort to the public treasury, will be of any permanent value in establishing agriculture. Simple and direct methods put into operation by the farmer himself are the only real sources for restoration.

Indirectly the farmer must be relieved by a reduction of national and local taxation. He must be assisted by the reorganization of the freight-rate structure which could reduce charges on his production. To make this fully effective there ought to be railroad consolidations. Cheaper fertilizers must be provided.

He must have organization. The acreage of wheat is too large. Unless we can meet the world market at a profit, we must stop raising for export. Organization would help to reduce acreage.

Diversification is necessary. Such loans as are wisely needed to assist buying stock and other materials to start in this direction should be financed through a government agency as a temporary and emergency expedient.

The remaining difficulty is the disposition of exportable wheat. I do not favor the permanent interference of the government in this problem. That probably would increase the trouble by increasing production. But it seems feasible to provide government assistance to exports, and authority should be given the War Finance corporation to grant, in its discretion, the most liberal terms of payment for fats and grains exported for the direct benefit of the farm.

"Whatever the King Did Pleas'd All the People"--II Samuel 3:36

By FORMER PREMIER ASQUITH, in "Genesis of the War."

What is to be said of the kaiser's subjects--not an ignorant and backward tribe, just emerging from the superstitions of barbarism or the yoke of serfdom, but in many directions among the intellectual pioneers of Europe, who, after passing through the stage of a somewhat sloppy and misty idealism, had, in face of enormous difficulties, achieved political unity and were showing themselves every year capable of holding their own, and more than their own, in all the practical activities--industrial, maritime, financial--of the competitive modern world?

How came such a people to place their fortunes, during the lifetime of a whole generation, at the mercy of the moods and whims, the gestures and phrases, of such a ruler?

It might almost be said of him, during the greater part of his reign, "Whatever the king did pleas'd all the people."

Nowadays kings know when to take a hint without waiting for the ax.

The execution of a Mexican general or two makes no real difference. The peons are the ones who count.

There seems to be a dispute over who started the World war, yet it is definitely known who finished it.

Another thrilling spectacle must be the proverbial 9,783 Mexican generals leading their brigade into action.
