

WRIGLEYS

after every meal

Cleanse mouth and teeth and aids digestion. Relieves that ever-present feeling and acid mouth.

Its L-a-s-t-i-n-g flavor satisfies the craving for sweets.

Wrigley's is double value in the benefit and pleasure it provides.

Sold in its Party Packages.

WRIGLEY'S

THE FLAVOR LASTS

Do You Want to Learn and Earn?

Our free course of instruction, of which the beautiful Flower Basket is the first lesson (price 50c money order), includes all kinds of baskets, trays, lamps, etc. Instructions so simple that anyone can learn quickly. Subjects so cheap that you can self-finish articles for many times their cost. An attractive club plan.

Oliver M. Hudson, Dept. 22
1488 Southwick, B'klyn, N.Y.

C-O-C

SPRINGLESS SHADES

Last Longer—Look Better

Who Plants a Tree

The really important bit of news that there were as many as 70,000 enrolled tree planters in the United States last year reminds us afresh of the good work of the American Tree Association. The only duty for membership in that far-reaching fraternity is that one shall get out a tree—a service to which every citizen and particularly every homemaker should turn with delight.

Good health depends upon good digestion. Safeguard your digestion with Wrigley's Indian Vegetable Pills and you safeguard your health. 318 Pearl St., N. Y. Adv.

Had Gay Funeral

By her own request, the funeral of the mother of Gen. Sir W. H. Congreve, noted British soldier, which took place in England, had as many of the features of a wedding ceremony as possible. The church was decorated with flowers, the service was fully choral, the clergy wore white stoles, the church bells rang a wedding peal and all the flags in the village were flown from the top of the staff.

Ship Frozen Food

Cold storage shipments by water have so increased that nearly 150,000 tons of frozen food was shipped through the Suez canal last year.

The hand that kindles cannot always quench the flame.

GAINED 60 POUNDS

E. S. Hardy of Marshall, Texas, writes: "I had a bad case of Bright's Disease and was told that I would never be able to work. I lost flesh till I only weighed 140 pounds, my blood pressure was so high that I had to be careful of my exercise."

I took Hobo Kidney & Bladder Remedy and I think I am entirely cured; the doctors say I am. I am running a locomotive engine every day and weigh 196 pounds. I feel for the suffering of others, and if I do me good to inform others of the faith I have in Hobo Kidney & Bladder Remedy.

For sale by all druggists.
Prepared by Hobo Medicine Co., Beaumont, Texas.

College and High School Students

We pay 25% commission on a good selling proposition. Your territory, your own town or county. No house-to-house canvassing. Straight commercial proposition. Old established house. Give age, sex and three references. Address

Box 1139, Charlotte, N. C.

Stops Itching

Peterson's Ointment

To the millions of grateful sufferers who know about the mighty healing power of Peterson's Ointment for sore feet and chafing, Peterson says, "Use it for skin and scalp itch; it never disappoints." All druggists, 35c, 60c.

SORE EYES

Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion relieves and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 10 to 15 hours. Relieve the weak eyes, cures without pain. Ask your druggist or dealer for BAILEY'S. Sold from Reform Dispensary, P. O. Box 181, Atlanta, Ga.

W. N. U., CHARLOTTE, NO 25-1924

In the Days of Poor Richard

CHAPTER XIV—Continued.
—14—

Their mission finished, that evening Jack and Solomon called at General Washington's headquarters. "General, Doctor Franklin told us to turn over the horses and wagons to you," said Solomon. "He didn't tell us what to do with ourselves 'cause 'twasn't necessary an' he knew it. We want to enlist."

"For what term?"

"Till the British are licked."

"You are the kind of men I need," said Washington. "I shall put you on scout duty. Mr. Irons will go into my regiment of sharpshooters with the rank of captain. You have told me of his training in Philadelphia."

So the two friends were enlisted and began service in the army of Washington.

A letter from Jack to his mother dated July 25, 1775, is full of the camp cheer:

General Charles Lee is in command of my regiment," he writes. "He is a rough, slovenly old dog of a man who seems to bark at us on the training ground. He has two or three hunting dogs that live with him in his tent and also a rare gift of profanity which is with him everywhere—save at headquarters."

"Today I saw these notices posted in camp:

"Punctual attendance on divine service is required of all not on actual duty."

"No burning of the pope allowed."

"Fifteen stripes for denying duty."

"Ten for getting drunk."

"Thirty-nine for stealing and desertion."

"Rogues are put in terror, lazy men are energized. The quarters are kept clean, the food is well cooked and in plentiful supply, but the British over in town are said to be getting hungry."

Early in August a London letter was forwarded to Jack from Philadelphia. He was filled with new hope as he read these lines:

"Dearest Jack: I am sailing for Boston on one of the next troop ships to join my father. So when the wars—God grant it may be soon—you will not have far to go to find me. Perhaps by Christmas time we may be together. Let us both pray for that. Meanwhile, I shall be happier for being nearer you and for doing what I can to heal the wounds made by this wretched war. I am going to be a nurse in a hospital. You see the truth is that, since I met you, I like all men better, and I shall love to be trying to relieve their sufferings. . . ."

It was a long letter but above is as much of it as can claim admission to these pages.

"Who but she could write such a letter?" Jack asked himself, and then he held it to his lips a moment. It thrilled him to think that even then she was probably in Boston. In the tent where he and Solomon lived when they were both in camp, he found the scout. The night before Solomon had slept out. Now he had built a small fire in front of the tent and lain down on a blanket, having delivered his report at headquarters.

"Margaret is in Boston," said Jack as soon as he entered, and then standing in the firelight read the letter to his friend.

"That is a real, genuine, likely gal," said the scout.

"I wish there were some way of getting to her," the young man remarked.

"Might as well think o' goin' to her an' back ag'in," said Solomon. "Since Bunker Hill the British are like a lot o' hornets. I run onto one of 'em today. He fired at me an' didn't hit a thing but the air an' run like a scared rabbit. Could 'a killed him easy but I kind o' enjoyed seein' him run. He were like chain lightning on a greased pole—you hear to me."

"If the general will let me, I'm going to try spy duty and see if I can get into town and out again," he proposed.

"You keep out o' that business," said Solomon. "They's too many that know ye over in town. The two Clarkes an' their friends an' Colonel Hare an' his friends, an' Cap. Preston, an' a hull passle. They know all 'bout ye. If you got snapp'd, they'd stan' ye ag'in' a wall an' put ye out o' the way quick. It would be pie for the Clarkes, an' the ol' man Hare wouldn't spill no tears over it. Cap. Preston couldn't save ye, that's sartin. No, sir, I won't 'low it. They's plenty o' old cusses for such work."

For a time Jack abandoned the idea, but later, when Solomon failed to return from a scouting tour and a report reached camp that he was captured, the young man began to think of that rather romantic plan again. He had grown a full beard; his skin was tanned; his clothes were worn and torn and faded. His father, who had visited the camp bringing a supply of clothes for his son, had failed, at first, to recognize him.

December had arrived. The general was having his first great trial in keeping an army about him. Terms of enlistment were expiring. Cold weather had come. The camp was uncomfortable. Regiments of the homeless lads of New England were leaving or preparing to leave. Jack and a number of young ministers in the service organized a campaign of persuasion and many were prevailed upon to re-enlist. But hundreds of boys were hurrying homeward on the frozen roads.

One day Jack was sent for. He and

By IRVING BACHELLER
Copyright by Irving Bachelier

his company had captured a number of men in a skirmish.

"Captain, you have done well," said the general. "I want to make a scout of you. In our present circumstances it's about the most important, dangerous and difficult work there is to be done here, especially the work which Solomon Binkus undertook to do. There is no other in whom I should have so much confidence. Major Bartlett knows the part of the line which Colonel Binkus traversed. He will be going out that way tomorrow. I should like you, sir, to go with him. After one trip I shall be greatly pleased if you are capable of doing the work alone."

Orders were delivered and Jack reported to Bartlett, an agreeable, middle-aged farmer-soldier, who had been on scout duty since July. They left camp together next morning an hour before reveille. They had an uneventful day, mostly in wooded flats and ridges, and from the latter looking across with a spy-glass into Bruteland, as they called the country held by the British, and seeing only, now and then, an enemy picket or distant camp. About midday they sat down in a thicket together for a bite to eat and a whispered conference.

"Binkus, as you know, had his own way of scouting," said the major. "He was an Indian fighter. He liked to get inside the enemy lines and lie close an' watch 'em an' mebbe hear what they were talking about. Now an' then he would surprise a British sentinel and disarm him an' bring him into camp."

Jack wondered that his friend had never spoken of the capture of prisoners.

"He was a modest man," said the young scout.

"He didn't want the British to know where Solomon Binkus was at work, and I guess he was wise," said the major. "I advise against taking the chances that he took. It ain't necessary. You would be caught much sooner than he was."

That day Bartlett took Jack over Solomon's trail and gave him the lay of the land and much good advice. A young man of Jack's spirit, however, is apt to have a degree of enterprise and self-confidence not easily controlled by advice. He had been travel-

away and followed, gradually closing in upon his quarry. When they were well away from the fire, Jack came close and called, "Bill!"

The sentinel stopped and faced about.

"You've forgotten something," said Jack, in a gentle tone.

"What is it?"

"Your caution," Jack answered, with his pistol against the breast of his enemy. "I shall have to kill you if you call or fall or obey me. Give me the rifle and go on ahead. When I say see go to the right, haw to the left."

So the capture was made, and on the way out Jack picked up the sentinel who stood, waiting to be relieved and took both men into camp.

From documents on the person of one of these young Britishers it appeared that General Clarke was in command of a brigade behind the lines which Jack had been watching and robbing.

When Jack delivered his report the chief called him a brave lad and said: "It is valuable information you have brought to me. Do not speak of it. Let me warn you, captain, that from now on they will try to trap you. Perhaps, even, you may look for daring enterprises on that part of their line."

The general was right. The young scout ran into a most daring and successful British enterprise on the twentieth of January. The snow had been swept away in a warm rain and the ground had frozen bare, or it would not have been possible. Jack had got to a strip of woods in a lonely bit of country near the British lines and was climbing a tall tree to take observations when he saw a movement on the ground beneath him. He stopped and quickly discovered that the tree was surrounded by British soldiers. One of them, who stood with a raised rifle, called to him:

"Irons, I will trouble you to drop your pistols and come down at once."

Jack saw that he had run into an ambush. He dropped his pistols and came down. He had disregarded the warning of the general. He should have been looking out for an ambush. A squad of five men stood about him with rifles in hand. Among them was Lionel Clarke, his right sleeve empty.

"We've got you at last—you d-d rebel!" said Clarke.

"I suppose you need some one to swear at," Jack answered.

"And to shoot at," Clarke suggested.

"I thought that you would not care for another match with me," the young scout remarked as they began to move away.

"Hereafter you will be treated like a rebel and not like a gentleman," Clarke answered.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that you will be standing, blindfolded against a wall."

"That kind of a threat doesn't scare me," Jack answered. "We have too many of your men in our hands."

CHAPTER XV

In Boston Jail.

Jack was marched under guard into the streets of Boston. Church bells were ringing. It was Sunday morning. Young Clarke came with the guard beyond the city limits. They had seemed to be very careless in the control of their prisoner. They gave him every chance to make a break for liberty. Jack was not fooled.

"I see that you want to get rid of me," said Jack to the young officer. "You'd like to have me run a race with your bullets. That is base ingratitude. I was careful of you when we met and you do not seem to know it."

"I know how well you can shoot," Clarke answered. "But you do not know how well I can shoot."

"And when I learn, I want to have a fair chance for my life."

Beyond the city limits young Clarke, who was then a captain, left them, and Jack proceeded with the others.

The streets were quiet—indeed almost deserted. There were no children playing on the common. A crowd was coming out of one of the churches. In the midst of it the prisoner saw Preston and Lady Hare. They were so near that he could have touched them with his hand as he passed. They did not see him. He noted the name of the church and its minister. In a few minutes he was delivered at the jail—a noisome, ill-smelling, badly ventilated place.

The yard was an opening walled in by the main structure and its two wings and a wooden fence some fifteen feet high. There was a ragged, dirty rabble of "rebel" prisoners, among whom was Solomon Binkus, all out for an airing. The old scout had lost flesh and color. He held Jack's hand and stood for a moment without speaking.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

His Lesson Went Wrong

The teacher was trying to impress on the children how important had been the discovery of the law of gravitation.

"Sir Isaac Newton was sitting on the ground looking at the tree. An apple fell on his head, and from that he discovered gravitation. Just think, children," she added, "isn't that wonderful?"

The inevitable small boy replied: "Yes, miss, an' if he had been sittin' in school lookin' at his books he wouldn't never have discovered nothin'."

ing alone for three days when he felt the need of more exciting action. That night he crossed the Charles river on the ice in a snowstorm and captured a sentinel and brought him back to camp.

Soon after that the daring spirit of the youth led him into a great adventure. It was on the night of January fifth that Jack penetrated the British lines in a snowstorm and got close to an outpost in a strip of forest. There a camp fire was burning. He came close. His garments had been whitened by the storm. The air was thick with snow, his feet were muffled in a foot of it. He sat by a stump scarcely twenty feet from the fire, seeing those in its light, but quite invisible. There he could distinctly hear the talk of the Britishers. It related to a proposed evacuation of the city by Howe.

"I'm weary of starving to death in this God-forsaken place," said one of them. "You can't keep an army without meat or vegetables. I've eaten fish till I'm getting scales on me."

"Colonel Riffington says that the army will leave here within a fortnight," another observed.

It was important information which had come to the ear of the young scout. The talk was that of well-bred Englishmen who were probably officers.

"We ought not to speak of those matters aloud," one of them remarked. "Some d-d Yankee may be listening like the one we captured."

"He was Amherst's old scout," said another. "He swore a blue streak when we showed him into jail. They don't like to be treated like rebels. They want to be prisoners of war."

A young man came along with his rifle on his shoulder.

"Hello, Bill!" said one of the men.

"Going out on post?"

"I am, God help me," the youth answered. "It's what I'd call a h-d of a night."

The sentinel passed close by Jack on his way to his post. The latter crept away and followed, gradually closing in upon his quarry. When they were well away from the fire, Jack came close and called, "Bill!"

The sentinel stopped and faced about.

"You've forgotten something," said Jack, in a gentle tone.

"What is it?"

"Your caution," Jack answered, with his pistol against the breast of his enemy. "I shall have to kill you if you call or fall or obey me. Give me the rifle and go on ahead. When I say see go to the right, haw to the left."

So the capture was made, and on the way out Jack picked up the sentinel who stood, waiting to be relieved and took both men into camp.

From documents on the person of one of these young Britishers it appeared that General Clarke was in command of a brigade behind the lines which Jack had been watching and robbing.

When Jack delivered his report the chief called him a brave lad and said: "It is valuable information you have brought to me. Do not speak of it. Let me warn you, captain, that from now on they will try to trap you. Perhaps, even, you may look for daring enterprises on that part of their line."

The general was right. The young scout ran into a most daring and successful British enterprise on the twentieth of January. The snow had been swept away in a warm rain and the ground had frozen bare, or it would not have been possible. Jack had got to a strip of woods in a lonely bit of country near the British lines and was climbing a tall tree to take observations when he saw a movement on the ground beneath him. He stopped and quickly discovered that the tree was surrounded by British soldiers. One of them, who stood with a raised rifle, called to him:

"Irons, I will trouble you to drop your pistols and come down at once."

Jack saw that he had run into an ambush. He dropped his pistols and came down. He had disregarded the warning of the general. He should have been looking out for an ambush. A squad of five men stood about him with rifles in hand. Among them was Lionel Clarke, his right sleeve empty.

"We've got you at last—you d-d rebel!" said Clarke.

"I suppose you need some one to swear at," Jack answered.

"And to shoot at," Clarke suggested.

"I thought that you would not care for another match with me," the young scout remarked as they began to move away.

"Hereafter you will be treated like a rebel and not like a gentleman," Clarke answered.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that you will be standing, blindfolded against a wall."

"That kind of a threat doesn't scare me," Jack answered. "We have too many of your men in our hands."

Easy to Answer

Owner—What will it cost me to have my car fixed?
Garageman—What's the matter with it?
Owner—I don't know.
Garageman—Forty-eight dollars and fifty cents.—Arkansas Utility News.

Tombstones are cold and cheerless, yet they always have a good word for everyone under them.—Ex.

Choosing a Vacation

Oscar had finally completed his education and now wished to be an architect. His father did not like it. "Nonsense!" said he. "There'll be practically no building for years—you'll have nothing to do."

"That's exactly the reason," said Oscar.—Megendorfer Blatter (Munich).

Motto of the bunko man—When in Rome do the Romans.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

MOTHER:—Fletcher's Castoria is a pleasant, harmless Substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Teething Drops and Soothing Syrups, prepared for Infants in Arms and Children all ages.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Wm. D. Fletcher. Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

MOSQUITOES

Bee Brand INSECT POWDER

It kills them!

Bee Brand Insect Powder won't stain—or harm anything except insects. Kills Flies, Fleas, Mosquitoes, Ants, Roaches, Water Bugs, Bed Bugs, Moths, Lice on Fowl. Household sizes, 15c and 35c—other sizes, 70c and $1.25, pump gun 75c, at your druggist or grocer. Write for free booklet—a complete guide for killing house and garden insects.

McCormick & Co., Baltimore, Md.

Easy to Answer

Owner—What will it cost me to have my car fixed?
Garageman—What's the matter with it?
Owner—I don't know.
Garageman—Forty-eight dollars and fifty cents.—Arkansas Utility News.

Tombstones are cold and cheerless, yet they always have a good word for everyone under them.—Ex.

Choosing a Vacation

Oscar had finally completed his education and now wished to be an architect. His father did not like it. "Nonsense!" said he. "There'll be practically no building for years—you'll have nothing to do."

"That's exactly the reason," said Oscar.—Megendorfer Blatter (Munich).

Motto of the bunko man—When in Rome do the Romans.

"I Can't Praise Self-Rising Flour Too Highly"

AFTER I used my first sack of self-rising flour (20 years ago) I ordered more for I knew right then I was never going to do without it. . . . I have never had a failure with anything I ever tried to cook with it. . . . I can't praise self-rising flour too highly."

It's hard to realize how much satisfaction there is in using self-rising flour until you try it. One thing is certain: when you learn what delicious biscuits and quick bread it makes, when you see how the ready mixing reduces your housework and when you realize what a saving it affords, like the South Carolina housewife quoted above, you "can't praise self-rising flour too highly."

Self-rising flour is made from choice sun-ripened soft wheat. Pure phosphate baking powder has been added in the proportion to make the dough properly. As in plain flour it comes in various grades. Ask your grocer for the same grade of self-rising you have been using in plain flour. Be sure it carries the Blue Shield, which is a guarantee of satisfaction.

FOLLOW THESE FIVE RULES For Making Perfect Biscuits with Self-Rising Flour: (1) See that your oven is hot! (2) Always use sweet milk or cold water! (3) Never add baking powder, soda or salt! (4) Use good shortening—lard, vegetable fat or butter! (5) Make soft dough—bake quickly. SOFT WHEAT MILLERS' ASS'N., Inc.

Use SELF-RISING FLOUR

It complies with all Pure Food Laws

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Every bag of self-rising flour bearing this Blue Shield is fully guaranteed by the Soft Wheat Millers' Association. If the contents are absolutely pure and wholesome and comply with all Pure Food Laws, we will refund your money if your liking requires. The Association will cheerfully refund your money.

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

It's Healthful—Dependable—Economical

© 1924, W.M.A.