THE WIDOWS MIGHT

Luke, 14-18 & C.
 And they all with one consent, began to make excuses.
 The first said, "I have bought me a piece of ground, and must need go and see it. I pray thee have me excused."
 And another said, "I have bought me five yoke of oxen & C. & C. And another said I have married a wife and therefore I cannot come."
 Romans 1-20
 So that they are without excuse.
 21. But became vain in their imaginations and their foolish hearts were darkened.
 22. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools.
 These things were so in the day of the Christ (for he so speaks) and in the days of the Roman power mid the people of Jerusalem and along the shores of the Mediterranean.
 But a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump, Gal 5-9.
 Ah my friends how true that is, just a few days ago a man went to his field to plow and as he looked around over the hills he saw a smoke arise, being selfish and having timber that he did not want burned, he went to see the meaning of the smoke. Arriving upon the scene just behind the mountain in the bend of the road he finds a man, his wife and three small children by the road side, their home and all they had in ashes what had been a shelter and the accumulation of years of work, denial and struggle gone to that demon fire, with them was a widow with two small children, one whose husband had lately passed to the great beyond and one who was not blessed with over much of this world's goods, and a neighbor, a man (one who had been sick and unable to work for about a year).
 The first man said unto the woman cheer up child crying will not bring back your home now, your household keepsakes but your neighbors through Gods help will replace your home there is a lot of lumber down yonder belonging to Mrs. ( ) the widow that we can get, the sick man said yes we will come in and replace your home, the widow said yes you can have enough of my lumber to build your house. So on the next day three men went out. One to Pisgah Forest station and two to the town of Brevard and did go into the high and low places and into the fields and highways and solicit help, the response way beyond anything of.
 On the next day a committee went to the widow and bought from her the lumber. She was for giving it but that was thought not fair to her as she is not blessed with an over abundant of this world's goods.
 On the next day there was a rally of men, uncle Jule, uncle Mitch, uncle B. J. Jimmy Perry, Ass John and Robert and by noon the foundation was laid and the corners up.
 Through the next day there were some out but others in and by night the house was nearly ready for the roofing.
 Saturday there were but three who could be working there but the others were out gathering up needful articles.
 There were some who contributed wearing apparel some household goods and some doors and brick.
 Yes, my friends, the response was more than liberal, it showed plainly that our people had the salt of human kindness in their hands. And the spirit of the Christ in their hearts.
 Of 116 approached by one solicitor there were only 4 refused and of the other 112 who contributed, several had been visited by fire at some time in their lives and were left with just their two hands.

 News came in from Mills River on Saturday where the men of the axe and saw are getting logs that another solicitor had been at work there and that he had collected a good sum.
 In the years gone by when the man was a lad he was on a tramp up Ronoke River by the head water and on via Buchannon to Natural Bridge being caught in a heavy storm drinched to the skin, the lad took shelter on a porch within a few moments a door opened and a woman said, "Come in, I have built a fire and you can change here, here is a suit of my husbands clothes, I am a widow, (she was the mother of two daughters,) and here is water and soap and a towel, take a good bath with soap and water and then rub down hard with the towel and you will find yourself much refreshed."
 When the lad was dry and dressed, this widow fed him. The storm broke and he would be on his way, so says he what do I owe you? The answer is impressed upon the lads mind unto this day, Owe me? why nothing, I am but paying a part of my debt to the world that Christ put upon me, but if you think you owe me, pass it on to the world.
 On the next day having been misdirected away from Fincastle, the lad got on to the old Va. N. C. cadam road—of song and story and came to a spring house with the trail leading to the spring, being thirsty he went to the spring and there found a woman, a widow and her two daughters. Asking for a drink of water it given and the lad would have passed on but the woman detained him and sent one of the girls up to the house, she returning in a few minutes had with her a plate full of old Virginia cookies. How many of you have ever been tickled with their never forgettable flavor? then it was that the woman offered the plate of cookies and a liberal measure of spring cold unskimmed milk. Now was that lad in an earthly paradise. "well you tell 'em," he had had no food except a small box of sardines and a few soda crackers since the evening before.

fore.
 When he started to leave the woman would have detained he to tarry over the night, it being near sun down and the road not a safe one, but the lad had to be on his journey so he asked her what do I owe you? The answer came nice, why you owe me nothing, Christ put a debt upon me when he was crucified and I must do all I can to pay it. If you think you owe anything, pass it on.
 Friends, this is a true story it happened to the lad in the summer that Garfield was assassinated and if these widows or their daughters are still living, he, (now an old gray man) wants to tell them that he feels that he has not yet paid even the interest on the debt and he is still trying to pass it on.
 Oh! how wonderful are the works of God and what strange ways he takes sometimes to make a man do his bidding and lead him to the light. Yes my neighbors how near an earthly heaven we are if we would only do his bidding.
 They all with one consent began to make excuses was true in the days of old but the love of the Christ the laymen that doth leaven the whole lump and the true love of Christ is finding lodgement in the hearts of the people.
