Shoes have become, almost overnight, extremely colorful and imaginative. Colored shoes have entered the sports mode, but colored shoes with a difference. These new colored shoes have not the remotest relation to the epidemic of colored kid shoes that swept through the mode in this country several seasons ago. The new colored shoes are carefully designed and subtle in color, as one would expect in a season where the mode is as sophisticated and full of nuances as it is this spring.

The smartest colored shoes are, perhaps, those in dark blue, combined with white for sports wear. This type of sports shoe appeared as early as last year at Deauville, in a flat-heeled Greco oxford of kid with a coquille d'oeuf colored saddle, and frankly low heels, broad and low, like the heels of a child's shoe. I wrote about these shoes last year, and here they are, with both feet in the mode. (That's a little mixed but you know what I mean) this year.

Dark Blue Shoes
Some of the smartest New York shops are showing dark blue kid one-strap pumps of the classic spectator sports type, and white buckskin oxfords with dark blue kid perforated trimming. These have the new lower heel that the smarter women are now preferring for sports, a "lift" heel, that is a heel made of solid leather, in dark blue.

Actually Tweed Shoes
Tweed, has permeated the mode, until it has actually settled on our shoes. But not really tweed, that would be really too heavy and fuzzy. Linen, printed to imitate tweed, and done so well that almost anyone, including myself, who is old Hawkeye where textiles are concerned, would be deceived, is used. These are combined with opalescent kid in color to match the predominating color in the linen. For instance, beige linen, printed with a dark green tweed design, has a dark green pear-finished kid heel and waxy piping and ankle-straps.

A beige linen shoe, absolutely correct for street wear with one's street or semi-sports clothes, is being shown in one of the smart New York Shops.

Colorful Evenings
For evening, satin slippers dyed to match one's gown are still extremely good.

Colored moire shoes, in the vivid biting greens, the purples, and the bright vermillions of this season are made with pipings of gold or silver kid and beautifully designed jeweled buckles. These rather exotic shoes are often shown with octagonal heels and slightly squared toes. The slipper is cut high on the foot with an oval cut-out at the side.

OIL FORMATIONS TOLD BY DODGE

Few motorists stop to think, when they drive up to a gas station and have the old family "charger" gassed and oiled, about the why and wherefore of the fuel they use every day.

A number of years ago, in fact, according to geologists, about 10,000,000 more or less, things started happening in a way to benefit the automobile owner of today. Diatoms, small animals invisible to the naked eye, abound on the surface of the water. They are of peculiar formation and when they die the shell, or diatom, a silica composition sinks to the floor of the ocean. Harkening back to other days, California was covered with water in many places and as the receding period came and the ages wore on these same diatoms formed diatomaceous earth and subsequently the oil which is pumped from wells today.

These shell-like fragments form diatomaceous ooze. The ooze, when it is compressed and lifted by slow motions of the earth, forms what is known as diatomaceous earth.

In some of this diatomaceous earth near Lompoc, California, fish have been known to be embedded in the ooze. The diatomaceous earth at Lompoc, being tilted higher than the rest, does not contain oil, for had oil existed it would naturally long since have drained out.

An exploring party in a Dodge Brothers victory six recently visited the Lompoc ground in search of geological specimens and reported finding numerous imprints of trilobites and of the vertebrae of fish which lived in the Paleozoic age.

THE PRAYER CORNER

A SONG OF THE OLDEN TIME

"Let us give a place in our hearts and a page in our book to the Song of the Olden Time. We catch the tender music winged to us from memory's busy hive and once again gather from the meadows of the past, the honied sweets of half forgotten strains. Oh, sometime, I think all the music of our lives shall come back to us—not a note missing—and the unwritten songs of our hearts shall find words and tune our tongues to harmonies divine.

"There's a song of the olden time falling sad on the ear. Like the dream of some village chime, which in youth we loved to hear. And ever amidst the grand and gay, when music tries her gentlest art, I never hear so sweet a lay, or one that hangs so round my heart."

"And when all this life is gone—
Ev'n the hope, lingering now,
Like the last leaves left on Autumn's sere and faded bough,
'Twill seem as still those friends were near
Who loved me in youths early day,
If in that parting hour I hear
The same sweet notes, and die away,
To that song of the olden time
Breathed like Hope's farewell strain,
To say in some brighter clime,
Life and Youth will shine again."

night, give a place in our hearts and a page in our book to the Song of the Olden Time. Let us catch the tender music winged to us from memory's busy life, and once again gather from the meadows of the past, the honied sweets of half forgotten strains.

Bring back all the music of our lives—not a note missing—and the unwritten songs of our hearts shall find words, and tune our tongues to harmonies divine, for there's a song of the olden time falling sad on our ear like the dream of some village chime, which in youth we loved to hear, and ever amidst the grand and gay, when music tries her gentlest art; we never hear so sweet a lay or one that hangs so round our heart.

Father, when all this life is done—even the hope lingering now, like the last leaves left on Autumn's sere and faded bough, may it seem as still those friends were near, who loved us in youths early day, if in that parting hour we hear the same sweet notes to that Song of the Olden Times, breathed, like Hope's farewell strain, to say, in some brighter clime life and youth will shine again. And with glad and grateful hearts we will praise and glorify Thy Holy and Blessed Name, O Thou who givest songs in the night, songs of joy and cheer to gladden Thy children when they fall asleep—"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep." Amen.—C. D. C.

Notice To Taxpayers

This is to inform you that under the law enacted by the Legislature of 1927 for the state, there can be no extension of time by the County Commissioners for the payment of taxes beyond the 1st Monday in May.

The law specifies that the tax collector "shall on the first Monday in May report in full the uncollected taxes for the current tax year, and the county commissioners shall thereupon order sale of all land for taxes where the taxes have not been paid to be made on the first Monday in June."

The law provides that any county commissioner who fails to perform any duty herein imposed shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. It also provides same penalty for the tax collector for failure to carry out the provisions of the law, and, in addition, makes him liable under his bond for all damages resulting from his negligence.

It is not the wish of the Commissioners nor of the Tax Collector to press anybody, but we have to obey the law; therefore it will be necessary to make settlement of your taxes sometime before April, as I have to prepare my delinquent list in April in order to be able to report the uncollected taxes the first of May.

I can see no advantage any one can gain by letting his property sell for taxes, as this adds advertising cost and 20% penalty if he redeems it, and he has to pay cost and penalties if he allows the county or some one who purchases the land to foreclose on the property in order to get a title.

It will be expected that persons who carry on a business for which a special privilege or license tax is required will secure the county license before June 1st, as it is a violation to carry on the business without having the license posted in one's place of business. See Sections 182 and 183, Revenue Act of 1927.

Yours very truly,

W. B. HENDERSON

TAX COLLECTOR.
