HARRY DUNCAN GETS WORTHY PROMOTION

Harry H. Duncan has recently been promoted to chief paying teller of East Tennessee Savings Bank at Knoxville. The directors were proud of the success of the young man from Rosman. They would have been prouder still, could they have seen the lad fifteen years ago as a schoolboy. Hardships and discouragements came almost daily, but did he fall beneath them? No, he kept struggling. Did he feel embarrassed when one of his classmates laughed at the patch on the seat of his trousers? No; he laughed with them and became more determined. Did that mother feel ashamed of him the night he graduated from high school? Indeed no! With a heart light as a feather she felt that she was also sharing part of his honors.

For eighteen months after graduation he worked in the Tannery in order that he might equip himself with a better position. Many times he faced unpleasant remarks from classmates, who were in college or held better positions. Several were amazed when they learned that he had entered Draughons Business college at Knoxville, Tenn. By a hard struggle he finished his course and became an employee in the East Tennessee Saving Bank. He is making a record and building a character that will prove worthwhile to him in the future.
