Cords and Chords

Dame Ethel Smyth, famous composer and conductor, is noted for her ready wit.

On one occasion she was giving an afternoon lecture to a distinguished gathering and, being troubled with the sun's rays falling just across her line of vision, she asked a male colleague seated beside her on the platform, and who, like herself, was entitled to add "Mus. Doc." to his name, to lower the windowshade.

In his endeavor to do so he had much difficulty with the cord, and, as he continued to struggle with it, Dame Ethel smilingly remarked: "Strange that a doctor of music should be unable to manage a common cord."
