HITCH HIKER BUMS AIR RIDE HERE LAST MONDAY

Skad Miller, of Toxaway, was hitch hiking to Asheville last Monday. Not many automobiles were going in that direction. Arriving at the Brevard airport just as Lloyd Marshall was preparing to take off for Asheville, Miller thumbed the pilot, and asked for a lift to the mountain metropolis. Marshall told the hiker to hop in, and off they went. Not, however, until Miller took time to shake hands with all the people about the port, for it was his first ride in the air, and he was not certain that he would ever see his friends again, so he shook hands with all of the fellows, buttoned his coat, yanked his hat tighter on his head, entered the plane and was on his way.
