TAKE A RIDE UP HIGHWAY
28 AND SEE WHAT IT MEANS.

If you are feeling blue, and things look black, just hop into the old tin lizzie and take a ride up Highway No. 28, to Whiteside Mountain, and see what is completed for you. The completed road work is within five miles of Highlands now, and forces are working at both ends of the incomplete stretch, which means that it will soon be done. Beyond Highlands there is but little to be done on the stretch on to Murphy. Other routes are already completed, and the entire Southland is turned directly into this section, through one of the most beautiful sections of mountain country in all the world.

Then think of Highway 28 on the other end of the line, from Virginia, down through the state, by Bat Cave, Hendersonville, and into Brevard. Then think of this highway becoming a Federal route, leading from that densely populated East and mid-West section, right into this community.

Crossing this highway at Brevard will be No. 284, from Greenville way by Caesar's Head, into Brevard, and then across Pisgah Mountain, to Waynesville and on through the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Folks, the thing is right here upon us. Better be ready for the crowds that are to come. If you think this "hot air," just go out and look for yourself. Surely you can trust your own eyesight.

TOO LOYAL TO ONE AND DISLOYAL TO THE OTHER.

One of Brevard's best business men was discussing with The Brevard News some of the things pictured herein last week concerning the bright outlook for this section. "I have my doubts about it," this friend asserted. Continuing, he said:

"Everything you pictured is based upon actual facts and figures, insofar as advantages of location, beautiful surroundings, and natural attractions are concerned. But you failed to take into consideration the human equation. Our citizens are too loyal to political parties and too disloyal to the community as a whole for this section ever to make any appreciable progress," he vowed.

His next statement was a stunner, when he further said:

"Take our leaders here, for instance. About all they think of is carrying the next election. They do not care anything about the community, or the growth of the town, or the advancement of the county. Their every thought is to get a political advantage over the opposing party. If our citizens were as loyal to Brevard and Transylvania county as they are to their political parties we would do all that your piece predicted, and a hundred times more. But, under the present line of political thought existing here, there is absolutely no chance for this section to make any advancement, or experience any growth," he said.

Is that man right? He is a cool, calm, thinking business man. He makes no practice of talking politics, and works hard at his own business. Now, he says, this community cannot make any business or economic progress because of the extreme loyalty of our leaders to political parties and their lack of loyalty to community interests.

What do you think about it?

"DOC" GALLOWAY'S FINE PHILOSOPHY.

"Doc" Galloway, successful operator of The Canteen, makes no pretense of being a public speaker, nor does he lay any claim to particular ability as a writer. In his own line of business he is a decided success. Those who know him best, however, are appreciative of his ability as a thinker, and enjoy Mr. Galloway's fine philosophy. His hobby is fishing in the summer time and hunting in the winter.

One day last week Mr. Galloway and some friends returned from a fishing trip. In the group was Mr. Arvil Simpson. It seems that Mr. Simpson had caught more fish than any other member of the party. Mr. Galloway was telling about the catch, and praised Mr. Simpson very highly, asserting that Simpson is, without any question, the best fisherman in the county.

"I tell you," Mr. Galloway said, "when a man beats me, and takes more fish than I can hook, or shoots more birds than I can bring down, I take my hat off to him." Slicing a roll and placing therein a hot dog, "Doc" then turned to his audience and said:

"Why can't we be that way in politics and in business? If a man is doing a good business, or is successful at the polls, why can we not congratulate him, and rejoice in his success just like we do when we see a fellow catch a 16-inch trout, or bring down two or three birds from one covey? It seems to hurt some people to see others prosper in business, or get elected, or appointed, to some office. We ought to be as good sports in business and politics as we are on the trout stream or in the field following the dogs."

If you know any finer philosophy than this, please let us hear it.

DON'T QUIT

Editor The Brevard News:
Your splendid appeal to the people to "hang on to what they have" in last week's paper was most timely. The encouragement in last week's issue alone was worth more than a year's subscription price to your paper. "I do not believe that any newspaper anywhere is doing more for the community in which it circulates than your paper is doing for this section. I heartily agree with every word of your editorial, in which you so clearly pointed out the rapid growth that must come to this section.

One of my children had copied a poem that fits in so well with your editorial last week that I am sending it in. You can use it if you so desire. I do not know the author of the poem, but it is really and truly a message to the people of this community just now, and reads as follows:

Don't Quit
When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you are treading seems all up hill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must—but don't you quit.

Life is queer with its twists and turns
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a "failure" turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow,
You may succeed with another blow.

Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man;
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup;
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.

Success is failure inside out—
The silver tint of the cloud of doubt,
And you never can tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you are hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you mustn't quit.

(Signed) A FRIEND.

(By CARL GOERCH)

As you drive along the highways in the eastern part of the state you can't help but notice the signboards advertising various tobacco markets.

"Kinston; best market in the state."
"Wilson; best market in the county."
"Greenville; best market in the world."

And so on. Each market claims that it sells tobacco higher than any other market. All of which is a lot of hokum. There is no difference in the markets and any slight variance that may occur in prices is brought about through difference in quality of the tobacco offered for sale.

In Martin county there are two esteemed and highly respected citizens who go by the names of Pleny Peel and Eny Peel. I didn't know the story about their names until John Bragaw told it at the meeting of the Washington Rotary Club last week.

The two men are brothers. Their parents desired to bestow names upon such fine children, so they named the first born Plenipotentiary. The next one was named Envoy Extraordinary. These names, however, are too long for common usage and have been shortened to Pleny and Eny.

And here's one for Ripley's Believe-It-Or-Not:

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. S. Waters live in Beaufort county. They have seven children.

All of these children were boys.
All were born on the same day of the month.
All were born in the same month of the year.

All were born exactly two years apart.

While we're talking about names, I never knew until the other day how John Phillip Sousa got his name.

He came to the United States from Italy as an immigrant. His real name was John Phillippos. Getting ready to leave his native country, he requested a friend to print his name on a large suitcase which held all his belongings.

The friend didn't know much about spelling. He intended to print "John Phillippos, U. S. A.," but he ran the letters all together without any punctuation so that it looked like "John Phillip Sousa." The noted band leader liked the name and continued to use it.

The best story I've heard this week was told to me by Lee Stewart.

A young lady and her boyfriend were attending the races at Belmont track, New York. A huge throng was present and the first race on the day's program was just about ready to start. There was confusion everywhere.

Suddenly the young lady stopped. Something had happened to her wardrobe. Her countenance became diffused with blushes. She started to speak, thought better of it, and finally decided to risk it.

"Have you," she whispered to her companion, "er—a have you a safety pin?"

At that very instant a stenographer voice close by cried out: "THEY'RE OFF!"

The lady screamed, and then promptly fainted.

The next legislature ought to bestow a befitting honor—a statue or something—on the citizen of North Carolina who has not come forward with some kind of a plan for relieving the cotton situation. Providing that such a citizen can be found.

Last week this column was devoted to revealing the fact that dogs never used their left hind leg in scratching themselves but used the right hind leg exclusively.

Here come a letter from Dick Williams of Elizabeth City, saying that he watched his dog carefully and discovered the animal using its left leg. He wants to know about it.

In a town where the newspaper publisher wanders around in his pajamas and does other weird and wonderful things, what can you expect of the dogs except that they, too, should be eccentric. If Mr. Williams will take his dog outside the city limits so as to get it away from the sphere of W. O.'s influence, he'll find that the pup will be entirely orthodox as to its scratching activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Powell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Peauff.

Miss Laura Anders was a dinner guest of Miss Leona Pridmore Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kilpatrick of Tracy Grove, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Kilpatrick Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Davis of Hendersonville, were supper guests of Mrs. Davis' sister, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Hamilton Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Orr and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Orr and children and Mr. Tildon Hood went on a lovely picnic up on Little Creek Sunday.

Mr. Frelon George and Mr. Neal Hamilton went South with a truck load of cabbage Tuesday.

Colonel Pridmore went to Dr. Newell at Brevard Monday with a bad foot. He has a case of blood poison.
