

Many Things Can Be Made to Pay Good Profits to the Industrious Man

With the approach of winter, a strange contraption, just being introduced in this country, soon will be scooting across snow fields and icy lakes at 10 miles an hour. From the icy fields of the Scandinavian countries, the National Committee on Wood Utilization of the Department of Commerce has brought to America the so-called "Scandinavian Spark," consisting of a chair mounted on long steel runners, and propelled by the driver standing on one runner and pushing with the other foot.

This is just one of more than one articles completely illustrated in the hundred useful home and other articles in the booklet, "You Can Make It For Profit," now being released from the Government Printing Office. Through representatives of the Department of Commerce, every country in the world was combed for ideas in the preparation of the book, according to Axel H. Oxholm, director of the wood utilization body.

The Committee points out that expensive tools and elaborate machinery are not required to make the objects described in the manual. On the other hand, a few simple tools found in almost every home will be sufficient to construct the articles. Most of these articles, according to the Committee, will find a ready market because they cater to the needs of the individual homes and do not compete with commodities produced on a mass-production scale.

"You Can Make It For Profit," in the opinion of Mr. Oxholm, should be helpful to those temporarily unemployed. At practically all times there are some men out of work and those who find themselves in this situation, could, with the assistance of the Committee's booklet and a little initiative on their part, establish themselves in their various communities.

Speaking of home industries in relation to the farm, the booklet reads: "About one-third of the Nation's timberland is in the hands of the farmers, and the development of home industries in the woodworking field, accordingly, would provide both an outlet for the products of farm woodlots and profitable occupation for the farmer during slack winter months."

Among the articles illustrated in "You Can Make It For Profit" are racks for canned goods and vegetables, clothes basket stands mounted on rollers; stairway shelves and utility racks; breakfast tables and benches; bathroom utility cabinets with laundry chute; built-in china closet and book case; fireplace bookcases; fireplace woodboxes; wood valances and wall panelling; storage chests; window seats and chests; garden furniture and toys.

The new manual, the third of a series of "Can You Make It" bulletins, contains, in addition to plans, lists of materials and instructions, suggestions for marketing the articles made for profit. It was written by H. Conrad Hoover, mechanical engineer of the Committee, and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., or from the district offices of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce located in leading cities. The manual sells for 10 cents a copy; $4 a hundred, or $40 a thousand.

SAYS EHRINGHAUS WILL GAIN BY BRUMMIT'S WITHDRAWAL

Raleigh, Nov. 23.—Friends of J. C. B. Ehringhaus say that he will gain through the withdrawal of Brummit from the governorship race.

Mr. Brummitt's support is of a high class of citizenship, is recognized, comprising of leading professional and business men in all communities of the state, and particularly the members of the teaching profession, who give him credit for greatly liberalizing the Hancock school law of 1929 in his interpretation of questioned provisions.

The school people, it is asserted, will not support Allen J. Maxwell because of their belief, whether well founded or not, that he will still further restrict school operations and expenditures. His criticisms of the State institutions relative to tuition costs for out-of-state students and his newspaper controversy with Supt. R. H. Latham, of the Winston-Salem schools, have definitely set the already forming school forces against him—and that this is a force, 23,000 strong which is being aroused and will have to be contended with in coming elections.

While it is conceded that Lieutenant Governor R. T. Fountain will get some of the school support, it seems certain that he has alienated much of it, not necessarily because of his action, but because of the fact that he is chairman of the State Board of Equalization, which has placed restrictions on school expenditures, as directed by the General Assembly, and which the school people oppose.

Because of these conditions and because of Mr. Ehringhaus' known enthusiasm for education, his friends say that he will get the bulk of the support of the school folks, as well as a larger share of the other support that would have gone to Mr. Brummitt. In fact, many leading citizens who were known to have been pledged to Mr. Brummitt have given assurance during the past week of their support of Mr. Ehringhaus.

The Ehringhaus platform, planks of which call for special consideration to the small farm and home owners who are hardest hit by the present economic conditions, as contrasted to the absentee landlord or landed aristocracy; revaluation of property for taxation purposes; a sure but sane economy in government without new departments, conservation of the State's credit, balancing the budget, opposition to the sales tax and a larger utilization of the State's natural resources, is one that appeals to the citizenship of the State as probably no other platform has in recent years. This platform is described as one that will work during the depression period, but also is satisfactory for more prosperous times which the State is expected to experience during the next few years.

Child's Home Life Creates Habits That Are Emphasized In After Life

It is in the home that the first habits are formed which are so fundamental to health and to character.

"Habits of eating, and of food likes and dislikes are formed early," says Miss Myra DeHaven Woodruff, home demonstration research worker at State College. "I know of a young woman who was unfortunately separated from her father when she was a young child and did not see him again until she was 23 years old. She and her friends had wondered why she had acquired certain peculiar food likes, such as vinegar on snap beans, gravy on pie, and certain others. She was astonished to find that her father had the same likes."

Habits of neatness also begin early, Miss Woodruff says. Some children from a crowded tenement section were given scholarships to an expensive nursery school. None of the children were over four years old at the time but when they went back to their crowded homes, they insisted on putting away their wraps as a result of their nursery school training. The habit of being neat or not being neat usually carries through life.

Habits of being prompt are important. So are those of playing fair, of courtesy, of truthfulness, of honesty, of perseverance, of independence. All of these habits have their beginnings in the home long before the child goes to school. Not only are these habits formed in the home but many fundamental attributes originate within the family, says Miss Woodruff. The attitude towards religion is pretty well set before school age. Attitudes towards marriage, towards parenthood, towards people are formed early and unfortunately frequently become fixed too soon.

The home can make or break character, she declares. It requires study and thought to prevent many maladjustments which appear later in adult life.

Sam—Why did you tip that girl so much when she gave you your coat?
Henry—Look at the coat she gave me.
