

QUIGGING OF PLATFORM OF THE REPUBLICANS

At Last the Truth Has Been Made Known.

PORTO RICAN PLANK OMITTED PROBABLY BY DIRECTION FROM M'KINLEY.

Washington, July 5.—At last we have the truth of the quigging of the Republican platform and it shows, as has been suggested all along in this correspondence, that the Porto Rican plank was omitted and the ship subsidy plank modified at the last moment, probably by directions from the White House in this city.

The senator describes a later meeting and continues: "At neither one of these meetings did any one suggest that the plank asserting the power of congress to govern the territories should be omitted, nor did any one suggest that the plank in regard to the merchant marine should be modified, and I did not know until after the platform had been reported to the convention that the plank asserting the power of congress to govern the territories had been omitted, or that the merchant marine plank had been changed to the form in which it appears in the platform.

Thus it appears that Mr. Foraker was not present at the meeting of the committee when the changes were made. Senator Fairbanks, who stands closer to the president than perhaps any man except Mark Hanna, was present at both, and asserts that the changes were acceptable to the committee. It follows that when Senator Foraker told Representative Grosvenor that Quigg "drove out" the planks on his own responsibility, he spoke of a matter of which he knew nothing except at second hand.

In view of these facts, the conclusion is irresistible that between the last meeting attended by Senator Foraker and the last meeting of all, the president, as has so often been the case before, began to wobble and instructed his dear friend, Senator Fairbanks, to omit these planks. But the Porto Rican plank had been inserted in the first place on the direct insistence of Senator Foraker, who needed it as an endorsement of his course in forcing the bill through the senate, and when he learned that it had been omitted, fiftieth street - vbgk emfw shls she he jumped to the conclusion that it had been done at the instance of Senator Hanna, who is not any too anxious for Foraker to be vindicated and re-elected to the senate two years from now. In fact, he wants his man Dick put in this place, so that he may be the supreme pte-giver of Ohio.

General Grosvenor sympathized with Foraker because he too had suffered by having the shipping plank, with which he had identified himself, cut out. This was obviously done in order to free the Republicans from the burden of carrying such a weight during the campaign. The whole thing proves that Foraker and Grosvenor are not quite so smart as the men against whom they are pitted, and that eternal vigilance is the price of having platforms drawn to suit one. If Foraker hadn't got tired and gone to bed, he could probably have kept the planks in.

The occurrence proves, too, that the administration is very doubtful of the consistence of its attitude on Porto Rican and fears that a court decision from an authoritative source may intervene and discredit it before the election, despite its efforts to stave off such an occurrence. Wayne MacVeagh, for instance, commenced proceedings which would have involved a determination of this question by the Supreme court, but the cases were terminated through the action of the government in pardoning Mr. MacVeagh's clients. The case of the Porto Rican who was brought to New York and detained under the contract labor law would have undoubtedly reached the Supreme court had not the detained immigrant been released by order of the secretary of the treasury. Other cases have been similarly terminated.

So there seems little chance of court action until after the election. It was probably thought best not to take any chances. Now, if such a decision does come, the president can say that he was always opposed to the abandonment of his "plain duty" and that he induced the convention not to endorse H. CRITTENDEN MARRIOTT

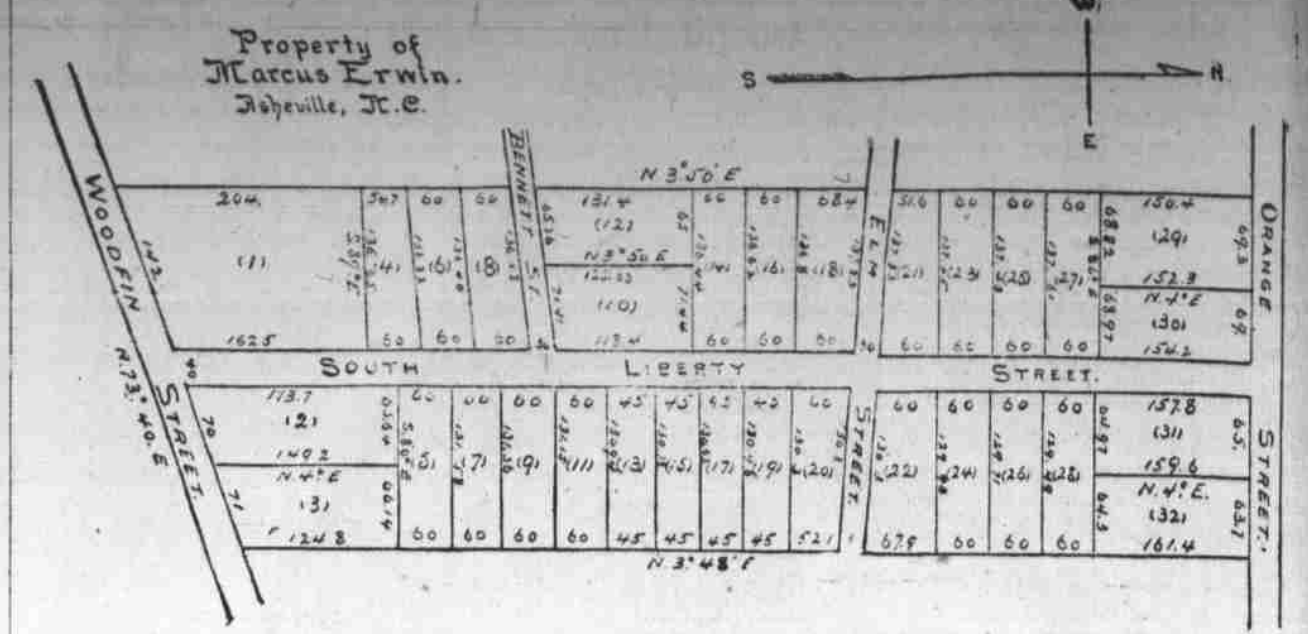

He Came Near Being Badly Hurt.

Little Johnny Smith of S. C. came to Asheville with his papa. While standing on the corner of Court Square looking at the Vance monument and beautiful court house he failed to notice his father had left him until he splashed across the street. He made a dash across the street and was run over by a grocery wagon. Like nearly all country boys, he had his lunch with him, which consisted of pie, cake and biscuit which was made with the Rumford baking powder. Little Johnny made a dive and saved his biscuit. Of course the usual crowd gathered and, finding Johnny was not hurt at all, thought it was strange, as the wagon was filled with boxes; but on close examination it was found that the boxes contained Rumford baking power, which of course solved the mystery. Johnny got off a funny remark; said the reason the eclipse of the sun did not take place in Asheville was that there was too much Rumford used, as Rumford made things light.
