A FATHER'S LETTER. Quaintly Expressed Advice For the Young

When Sir Philip Sidney was twelve years old he had made such good progress in his studies that he wrote to his father a letter in Latin and one was necessary to read in Latin, and French was the language of courts, so both tongues were begun early and studied more practically than we nowadays think requisite. But young hilip's letters seem to have greatly ed his father, for in return Sir

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded dis-case that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its rearry. TELEGRAPH TYPEWRITING An Ingentous Machine Which Sends and Receives Messages,

A wireless telegraph writer, or acrograph as it is called for the sake of evity, has been invented by an Engllshman. The zerograph in appearance resembles an ordinary typewriter, but it is of simpler construction, with a keyboard figured with the sigus of the letters and numerals, which can be printed or telegraphed to any number of Instruments. Each Instrument, the inventor explains, is at once a receiver and a transmitter, enabling operators to converse with one another in writng, and thus obviating misunder standings; which are apt to occur in telephonic communications; So far messages have been sent only for a short distance, but it is intended to experiment over wider spaces, and it is hoped that messages can be sent to any distance that ether waves will carry. The machine is always ready for inimediate use, and as there is no mechanism which requires to be wound up in order to obtain synchronism, the operator has both hands free for manipulation, Another advantage claimed for the avention will be of special importance in military affairs. Messages cannot be picked up. To quote the inventor's own words: "In sending a message you are sounding two ether waves which allow you a choice of fifty six signs, and these are given direct print, either as letters or figures. Absolute secrecy is thus obtained. The only way to intercept messages would be to employ a similar instrument, which would have to be synchronized to the same degree as the transmitting instrument. Lastly, these machines will receive their messages (which are given at present at a speed of twentyfive words a minutel without anybody being present, and would thus be of great advantage in a signal box, as the signal map will receive clearly printed instructions should be be absent the time the message is sent to him. Nor will the machines work only without wires. I gave a lecture in Paris before the Society of Engineers, of which I am a member, daring which I sent messages to Brussels. while telephonic communication was going on over the same wires. I have sent messages also between Berlin writer, which, by depressing a key, sends two impulses. Each letter re quires only two impulses, and the different letters are obtained by means of the time interval between these_impulses. For wireless purposes these impulses operate a switch connection with the induction coil, thus making the sparks for sending the ether The induction coil is connected with an nerial as well as an earth wire. To turn the apparates into a receiving instrument it is only necessary to move a switch, which is placed beneath the typewriter. This thakes all the commetions to the receiving apparatus, which consists of a coherer and a very sensitive relay .-The Inventive Age.

Some years ago the masters of Eton. College took over the management (as a limited company) of the Eton College Boating Club, which previously had been carried on by private persons under contract.

Since then the masters have extended their trading operations, gradually taking up lines hitherto conducted by shopkeepers in the town. The unfority of the tradesmen in E.on depend in the main on the college for their business, and some of them have already suffered severely from the new policy of the masters.

The latest development of this innovation, writes a correspondent, is the acquisition by the masters of one of the oldest of the famous "soc-shops" (pastry cook's and confectioner's). where the boys have for centuries past revelled in cakes, sweetmeats and other luxuries. It is understood that henceforth the masters will run this establishment themselves for their own benefit. The whole of the trading community in Eton is seriously alarmed .- London News.

Nothing Lost.

"They take tremendous precautions at the mint so that no specie shall be lost," said an Englishman, with a reminiscence of an article he had been reading on the subject. "Every scrap of refuse is burned in order that not the slightest vestige of metal shall be wasted. The working clothes of the men are burned, too, when they are worn out, and they even burn the carts which are used in carrying the bullion to the mint.

"Well," said the American in the guess we go one better than that in our immortal country. "We burn the refuse, and the clothes and the carts. Yes, sir, we do all that, and, what is more, when a man dies who has worked there we have him cremated." Then they talked about the weather .-

Peaches as Fillers.

When setting out an apple orchard for commercial purposes, trees should be spaced thirty feet apart each way. As fillers we may use peach trees, which are shorter lived than apples. in many instances the apple is used for fillers, but for quick returns the peach is preferable, as the apple is a slower grower. The peach can fill the place for a number of years without coming into contact with the growth of the apple. These peach trees, however, should be closely pruned in order not to check the development of the apple trees. As the peach is naturally short lived, we may harvest many good crops before removing them. For cour mercial apple growing we should plant only the good keeping varieties, such as York Imperial, Mammoth Black Twig and Dutton. These apples will at all times bring good prices, and the demand is increasing annually. Not only is the demand in the United States in creasing, but Russia, Germany and England are consuming increasingly of our American apples.-Inland Farmer
