In Memory of Our Loving Friend Mrs. Naomi Vanhook

Our community was deeply grieved Saturday, February 23rd, by the death of Mrs. Naomi Vanhook. At the time of her death she was 38 years, 10 months and 18 days of age. She had been a member of Clark's Chapel Methodist Church about 20 years and was a devoted Christian.

We cannot think of her as being in a strange land, for she has gone to join the many loved ones who have gone on before.

While her presence is greatly missed in the home and community we have sweet assurance that our loss is her eternal gain. She was a kind and loving mother and friend, loved by all who knew her. Oh, how we will miss her, she was so kind. She always met us with a sweet smile.

She leaves a loving husband, four children, two sisters and two brothers to mourn her loss.

She was laid to rest in Clark's Chapel Cemetery February 25th. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. R. A. Truitt.

"Did you have any trouble making the rescue?"
"A little. I had to hit him over the head to make him let go, but I finally got the keg aboard."

Co-Operation in Work Will Enrich the Farmers

The upward trend of agriculture and the betterment of farming conditions is marked by very definite moves and co-operative efforts. The farmers of Western North Carolina know what it is to smile and how to shake hands with his fellow man. You know he feels it, he means it because the twinkle of his sturdy eye shows that he is living a life of respect and confidence. He is no longer a man that hesitates in his moves or looks upon the world with an air of doubt and suspicion. He realizes that he is a man among men, that his wits and senses are as good and sound as that of other business men. In other words he is coming into his own rights and accepts his position as fair and just, and in co-operation and competition with other interests, he is ready to carry his load ably.

By no means has he reached the goal to which he aspires. There is a long way and a rough and difficult path to travel before such a condition is reached. His confidence is being strengthened and fortified by the things that are being done and which are proving successful undertakings, not in one line, but in several. There is no great system of agriculture in Western North Carolina which we can boast of as having been successful for the last 25 years. Many factors have entered in to prevent a system from being practiced in the past, the transportation system or roads, has been a very great limiting factor, the human element another and lack of co-operative marketing organizations. A great system of agriculture is now being developed. This system is being based upon co-operative effort, careful analysis of climatic and soil conditions, study of crops and livestock suited to the section, study of markets for the crops and livestock and the co-operative marketing of same. This is the only safe and proper method under which we can proceed.

Results are already being secured; definite results. Already Western North Carolina is becoming known as a section that produces choice, highly colored and flavored apples, berries, etc. With proper care to pruning, spraying and fertilization, apples will return excellent incomes. Seed potatoes from Western North Carolina have outyielded seed potatoes from any other section of the United States and Canada and matured just as early. This is becoming a very important crop. Instead of storing potatoes in the ground until potatoes from the north come in, they are being marketed in the summer when the price is good and competition small. Lettuce is a very promising crop for this section, it is being grown in a small way this year in several parts of Western North Carolina, except in Polk county, where a large acreage is being put out for spring sale.

The growing of cabbage in Watauga and Macon county is proving successful. In Watauga they have a co-operative kraut factory and put on the market several hundred tons of choice kraut. In Macon county the growers sold co-operatively, cabbage from 35 acres at a good price.

Poultry and dairying are especially suited to Western North Carolina and is developing very rapidly, the selling of whole milk, cream and cheese is bringing good incomes to those engaged in it. The shipping of yard eggs, and broilers to market is soon to become a worthy undertaking for every farmer.

The production of feeder and stocker cattle is on the decline and it is as well that it is because they are usually produced at a loss. Those men that are producing that grade of cattle will find that it will be money in their pockets to produce baby beef which can be grown so much quicker and sell for a much higher price.

To develop this system to its most profitable stage will require co-operation, work and a determination to stick to the job closer during periods of stress and difficulty than in periods of prosperity. Prejudices and personal feelings must be eliminated and the purpose and worthiness of the undertaking must be ever present.

Co-operative marketing organizations are absolutely necessary and no man should hinder its development by withholding his membership and support. It is to the marketing organizations that we look for an outlet for the products we produce on our farms.

With co-operation in production and co-operation in marketing, we can forward the agricultural development in Western North Carolina rapidly. JNO. W. GOODMAN, Jr. District Agent.

SOY BEANS.

The farmer that has plenty of green feed in the farm of beets or silage and plenty of soy bean hay need not worry about the feed problem. Are you planning to grow a larger acreage of this soil improving crop this year? If so ask your county agent about the best varieties to plant, where to get seed, methods of planting and cultivating, and the best fertilizers to use.
