IN MEMORY OF CHARLEY CARPENTER

He has gone and left us.
He's sleeping now beneath the clay;
Oh, 'tis lonely here for us,
Since little Charley went away.

Oh, we miss his loving voice,
And the pattering of his little feet;
As he would come along our pathway,
With that smile always so sweet.

His suffering is now over,
Which was so hard to bear;
And now he's resting peacefully,
In that land so sweet and fair.

Dear ones, do not weep for Charley,
For he's happy in that land;
As his voice floats out sweetly,
Singing in the angel band.

He's now waiting 'cross the river,
Where there is no setting sun;
Watching for the loved ones left behind,
As they are gathered in one by one.

Let us all be true to Jesus,
Till this life on earth is o'er;
Then we'll meet with little Charley,
Ne'er to part from him more.

EULA WELCH.

YOU CAN'T KEEP FARMERS DOWN

Why is it that Farmers keep right on being successful in the fact of adversity?

It is not "luck." It is the use of plain horse sense, enduring pluck, and hard work.

His horse sense leads him to buy the most modern implements obtainable. His pluck and his hard work enable him to use them to best advantage.

We are showing a wonderful line of modern implements for the farmer. They are the means of wresting success from adversity, and the price is within the reach of all.

Have you seen these implements? Drop around and get "an eye full" on your next trip to Franklin.
