School News

Mr. William McGuire entertained the senior class Friday night, February 12, at his home with a Valentine party. Many interesting games, both old and new, were played. Delicious refreshments were served. Owing to the bad roads many of the seniors who live in the country, were deprived of this pleasure so much enjoyed by those present.

The chapel programs last week were given by the ninth and tenth grades. These programs are becoming more and more interesting. The efforts of teachers and students combined render valuable training as well as entertainment.

A contest of stunts was given by the S. S. S. and Lanier Literary Societies last Friday. This was the fifth of a series of contests and the fourth which the Laniers have won. Rah! Rah! Rah!

The exercises Tuesday morning were given by the senior class. The program was amusing, as one would expect anything to be, under the supervision of Mr. Moss. It is a miracle that somebody did not say "Work for the Annual," right in the middle of his role, the seniors are so enthusiastic over the first Annual to be published at F. H. S., which will be an honor to the class of '26.

The boys' basket ball team has played two games since the last writing, Dillard and Cullowhee on Franklin's court. The Cherokee boys are to come to Franklin next Saturday. Here's hoping we beat 'em!

Jokes

Old Colored Mammy—"Ah wants a ticket for Florence."

Ticket Agent (after 10 minutes of weary thumbing over railroad guides)—"Where the deuce is Florence?"
"Settin' over dar on de bench."

Lesson in Honesty.

Mr. Bramlett was giving the class a lecture on honesty. "Now, then," he said, pointing to a boy in the back row, "suppose a friend lent you his overcoat and, putting it on, you found in one of the pockets a quarter which your friend had completely forgotten. You wouldn't keep the quarter, would you?"

"Certainly not."
"That's right," said Mr. Bramlett. "What would you do with it?"
"I would spend it."

Mrs. Newlywed—"Oh, George, I forgot to get the soap. Run over to the grocer and get a couple of bars. I want to wash the lettuce."

Son—"When a man is in love every thing looks different to him."

Dad—"Yes, it's the same way when he knocks his head against a lamp-post."

Teacher—"Now, children, it is the law of gravity that keeps us on the earth."

Willie—"But teacher, how did we stick on before the law was passed?"

An old Spartan king was once asked what boys should learn in school replied, "I suppose what, being men they shall do." A good definition one hard to improve. This is a great day for technical education. But the child must learn to be honest, to work, to be obedient, to deal fairly with his fellow men, to be a good citizen.

H. G. Wells, a man whom a lot of folks consider very wise, says that we have now come to a time when we have a race between education and catastrophe. Education must take into consideration political ideals, economic question, social customs, laws and morals, in fact, everything.

It has been said, "Education is knowledge, knowledge is power, that the general and universal diffusion and education among the people is the surest guarantee of happiness, liberty, wealth and welfare."

Things of Interest at the Methodist Church

At 11 o'clock on Sunday morning the 14th, the pastor, Rev. B. C. Reavis, gave to a very appreciative and interested congregation a sermon of unusual spiritual power and practical application. He announced as his subject: "A Pinched Committee That Got Results," taking for his text "And They Said, One to Another: 'Why Set We Here Until we Die?'"

He told in a very forcible way of the great famine in Israel which drove mothers to such desperation as to boil and eat their own babes for food, while the city was being besieged by the Syrians, and of four lepers who sat "at the entering in of the gate" also starving. He spoke of how they consulted together—held a committee meeting—as to their best course under the desperate circumstances. Nothing seemed plausible but one thing they all agreed on, and that was, "if we sit here we will die," so they decided to throw themselves upon the mercy of their enemies, the Syrians, for they at least had food. How they found through the providence of God, the camps of the Syrians deserted, but filled with food and riches of all sorts; how after satisfying themselves, they returned to the starving city to take the good news of salvation to their countrymen.

Mr. Reavis then proceeded to draw lessons of practical and spiritual value to his congregation. He showed how inactivity meant death, how if we wanted anything, we must get up and go after it, and not sit idly and indirectly by waiting for things to happen. He said in part, that indifference, neglect and procrastination were the deadly sins that caused not only failures in this life, but failure to gain life eternal—that given sufficient desire and effort put forth promptly and continuously, the elimination of the many sad cases of want and failure in the world today, would follow and make the waste and desert places to bloom as the rose, and flow with milk and honey.

He said neglect and inaction was the only thing necessary to cause a man to lose even his soul. In this connection he quoted the following forcible lines:

"He made no mistakes, took no wrong road

He never fumbled the ball.

He never went down neath the weight of a load—

He simply did nothing at all.

"He lost no hard fight in defense of the right.

He never bled with his back to the wall.

He never fell faint in his climb to the light—

He simply did nothing at all.

"So death came nigh, for life slipped by,

And he feared for the judgment hall;

When they asked him why, he said with a sigh,

'I simply did nothing at all.'

"Oh, God will pardon your blunder my friend,

Or regard with pity your fall;

But the one big sell that surely means hell

Is to simply do nothing at all."

He also spoke of the obligation resting on those who enjoyed superior blessings to pass on such blessings to others. A very earnest appeal was made to the members of the church who had been recipients of the "riches of grace through Christ Jesus," who had feasted on the "Bread of Life" and drunk of the "Water of Life" to carry the glad tidings to those who were starving for this spiritual food.

Miss Margaret Rogers, who has just returned from a visit of several weeks to Washington was welcomed back to her place at the organ.

The evening service was very well attended and the subject, "Straining at Gnats and Swallowing Camels" was interpreted to mean getting a wrong perspective of life. It was pointed out how disastrous it was not to be able to truly judge, and place in their proper places the things of life—giving first place to things of real and lasting value and relegating to the background the things of minor importance—those things of time and sense, fleeting and unsatisfying. That in order to be able to make this all important distinction we must put ourselves under control of the Revealer of all Truth.
