CULLOWHEE BUILDING A WESTERN N. C. MUSEUM

Cullowhee, N. C.—Cullowhee State Normal school is working upon the idea of maximum service to Western North Carolina. Some institution in this part of the state should seek to become the interpreter of this section not only to our own people but to the outside world as well. There should be a Western North Carolina Museum, where the historic relics of this part of the state should be permanently preserved. In keeping with this idea, President Hunter has inaugurated a movement looking toward the assembling at Cullowhee State Normal school, as the logical place for such collection, historic relics and specimens of our resources with the view to having here, ultimately, a museum of history that shall preserve for future generations the things of value in the history of this section. Already have friends learning of this movement, offered their services and contributed relics of value. The Blackwood Lumber Company, of East Laporte, has offered to contribute three solid oak cabinets, made of Western North Carolina timber. Indian tomahawks, arrowheads, peace pipes, etc., are coming in. Also Confederate money Confederate cartridge boxes, important original documents, an ancient Bible, one-hundred and fifty year old law book, and a two-time steel table fork brought from Ireland by an early settler, have been contributed by friends. Some friends, who have relics they are unwilling to part with, are lending the same, either temporarily for our commerce exhibit, or indefinitely. It is the purpose of the authorities to gather specimens of minerals, timber, furniture, clothing household articles, which are representative of the present and past of Western North Carolina; and to put each article under lock and key, in glass-covered cabinets, with the history of each article attached.
