How Miami Beach was devastated by the hurricane is indicated by this photograph showing trees torn up, with water in the streets four blocks from the ocean shore.

N. C. Farmers Lucky
Compared With Others,
N. L. Barnard Declares

N. L. Barnard returned to Franklin Wednesday of last week after a four months trip through the northwest. While away, Mr. Barnard visited his two sons, Harry Barnard and J. C. Barnard, of Grandview and Seattle, Washington, respectively, and his two daughters, Mrs. Joe Younce and Mrs. R. J. Koper, both of Fossil, Ore. Mr. Barnard had planned, just before returning to North Carolina, to pay visits to other Macon county people in the northwest. He changed his mind, however, he said, when a snowstorm swept that country. He decided to leave the northwest and the snow storm simultaneously, and had to postpone the visits he had planned.

North Carolina farmers are in better condition today, Mr. Barnard declared, than any he saw in the northwest. Low prices for farm products and the high cost of farm labor are given by Mr. Barnard as the primary causes of the agricultural distress in the west.

Despite the agricultural conditions, however, Mr. Barnard returned to this State with nothing but words of praise for the State of Washington, which he declares is one of the best States he has ever seen.

Second Survey With Reference To Sewerage
And Disposal Plant

After some discussion, the Board of Aldermen, at that body's meeting on Monday night, decided to have W. N. Sloan, local civil engineer, make a second survey of the town, looking to a sewerage system and disposal plant combined. The new survey is to take in the entire town. Mr. Sloan was requested to be ready to make his report next Monday night.
