Field Selected Corn Gives Best Yields

Plant all the grains of corn on an ear in one long row nad one of the resulting stalks will produce twice as much corn as the stalk from another grain. This is one reason why seed corn must be selected in the field if the variety is to be improved and developed.
 "Good seed is one of the chief factors in corn production," says G. M. Garren, cereal agronomist at State College. "High yielding strains and varieties can only be developed by persistent field selection of seed in the fall. This is better than crib selection in winter or next spring because the plant as a whole must be considered when getting at the basis of high production."
 Mr. Garren made a test at the Mountain Branch station near Swannanoa in 1926. He planted 23 rows, each 109 feet long, using the seed from an individual ear on each row. The high producing row contained 48 stalks and produced 47 pounds of ears. The lowest yielding row contained 44 stalks and produced only 22 pounds of ear to the row. Certainly, he states, corn from the first row would outyield that from the other and these desirable traits in corn growing can only be discovered by studying the plants in the field.
 The grower must keep in mind the type of corn that he wishes to grow. The dairy farmer wants a different corn from that desired by the market gardener or the crop farmer. The average crop farmer wants a vigorous, broad-leaved stalk of medium height wit htwo good ears growing about half-way up the stalk. The ears ought to be sound and symmetrical and bear about 16 rows of smooth-capped grains of medium depth. A good high yielding corn of this kind may be developed by field selection. Such corns as Southern Beauty, Indian Chief, Cocks Prolific and others in North Carolina were developed by this method.

Tax Valuation Reduced

Macon county is poorer by over $100,000—so far as assessed valuation of property is concerned—as a result of the recent action of the State Tax Commission on the appeal of the W. M. Ritter Lumber company. The commission, composed of W. T. Lee, of the State Corporation Commission, R. A. Doughton, State revenue commissioner, and D. G. Brumitt, attorney general, cut off practically one-third of the valuation of the Ritter company's property as it was fixed by the county assessors.
 The Ritter property, valued by the county assessors at a total of $316,022, was valued by the State Tax Commission at $203,717, or $112,305 less.

 The result of course is that the county has approximately $100,000 less property to levy tax against, and that other taxpayers will have to make up the difference.
 The assessed valuation of the timber was cut from $211,022 to $150,000, or from approximately $14 an acre to $10 an acre.

The band mill's assessed valuation was cut from $35,000 to $4,000, or approximately one-ninth of the first valuation.
 Other property on which valuations were cut follows: one locomotive, from $6,000 to $4,000; one loader, from $2,000 to $1,000; 34 log cars from a total of $5,000 to $1,700; tools from $2,000 to $500; and cross ties, from $25,000 to $12,517.

Camel

Climbing to new heights of popularity

Government figures show that more Camels are being smoked today than ever before. One after another Camels passed them all.

If all cigarettes were as good as Camel you wouldn't hear anything about special treatments to make cigarettes good for the throat. Nothing takes the place of choice tobaccos.
