A Recent Conversation In Macon County

"Daddy, I want to join the 4-H club."
"What in thunderation you want to join that darn thing for?"
"Why, Daddy, lots of other boys are joining and I want to make some money of my own."
"What does it cost to join?"
"Nothing to join, Daddy, but I need five dollars to buy me a pig."
"Nothing doin'. Me and my daddy and his daddy got along without any of these new fangled clubs and I ain't a goin' to spend no money to buy you nothing."
With a sob the boy went away.

Another Conversation
"Daddy, I want to join the 4-H club."
"All right, son, but what is that 4-H club you want to join and what is its object?"
"Not 4-J, Daddy, but 4-H. It means heart, hand, head and health."
"Sounds pretty good, son, but where do I come in?"
"Well, you see, it is like this: Mr. Harris, the county agent, has been all around over the county and has succeeded in getting 315 boys and girls to join. The members of this club are going to raise chickens, pigs, potatoes and just everything, but it costs a little money to get started."
"What are you figuring on raising, my boy?"
"Why, I want to get 200 thoroughbred chicks and start in with them. I'll also need a brooder house and a brooder, and if you will get me these chickens and things, I'll pay you back out of my profits."
"Fair enough, son. You go and see the county agent and have him order what you want and I'll foot the bill."

"Hold on there, Daddy," said daughter. "I'm going to join that club, too."

"Why, I didn't know that 4-Z club was a highbrow woman's club."

"It's not a 4-Z club and it's not a highbrow club. Brother told you it is a 4-H club and he told you what it means."

"All right. You kids have got me hooked. What do you want?"

"I want some turkeys and I'm going to let Mrs. Walter Elliott know she has been in a race before this year closes."

"All right, daughter, go to it. But I warn you now that Mrs. Elliott is going to be mighty hard to beat when it comes to raising turkeys. See Mr. Harris about what you want."

LEARN VALUE OF YOUR TIMBER

It pays to know the volume of timber in a farm woodland before making a sale, says the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture. If the farmer does not know how to estimate standing timber, he would do well to call in expert assistance, which can often be obtained through the county agent or state extension forester. The value of such an estimate is shown by the experience of a woodland owner in Williamson county, Tenn. The highest bid which he received for his tract of hardwood timber before it was estimated was $2,700, which he was inclined to accept. However, he employed an experienced cruiser to estimate the timber and assist him in finding other bidders. Within three months the tract was sold for $6,500, half in cash and half due in six months. The cruiser charged $500 for his services, and the owner thus netted $6,000, or $3,300 more than he would have obtained without securing assistance.

Bees make honey and honey is money. The owner can sit on the fence, watch the dough fly in, give his neighbor a grin, as the bees gather dollars and cents.

HEAD YOUR FARMING RIGHT

the barns, the conveniences for the farmer and his family have long been far above the average for the South because this farming was headed the right way.

The Farmers' Headquarters

In the very nature of things farmers should have a common meeting ground when visiting the county seat. Since the farmers own the Macon County Farmers Federation we know of no more suitable meeting place than their own store. Just drop around at any time and discuss with the manager what you will need during the coming season and what you will have for sale. Let's all get together and talk about our fertilizer needs, improved seeds, poultry, hogs, dairying and everything of interest to the farming population of the county.

Make your own store your headquarters while in town. Incidentally you will find the necessities of life at exceedingly low prices at YOUR STORE. Do not forget, either, that the stockholders get a dividend on the amount of merchandise purchased at The Farmers Federation.
