IN MEMORY OF JOHN HOYT HILL

John Hoyt Hill was drowned on September 1, 1928, in the Chatoga river near his home at Highlands, N. C., while fishing up stream near The Narrows of the channel. When he stepped into the deep water, the current was so swift that it swept him into the whirlpool, pinning his legs between two rocks and throwing his head against a jutting boulder, thereby inflicting unconsciousness and the consequent impossibility of release. Since a child, he had fished in this stream and always previously had swum down through the whirlpool to safety.

John Hoyt Hill was born in the suburbs of Asheville, N. C., in 1890, but a few years later, his parents moved to the village of Horse Cove, situated near Highlands, N. C. It was there on the beautiful spacious farm land resting under the sublime grandeur of Black Rock Mountain that he waxed into manhood. He spent his youth with his family assisting them in the developing and the enriching of their home and estate; and for his family, he cherished an unceasing devotion.

As he grew in stature, there unfolded a wondrous awareness, appreciation, and love for all in nature: of mountains, their forests, their streams, their winding paths, their insurmountable heights, and the inexpressible beauty which they ever yield to man; of the rocks, trees, insect, animal, and plant life, an intimate knowledge and companionship.

The obvious pleasures of life never attracted him. He received his greatest happiness and contentment from his mother, father, sisters, and brothers, his neighborhood companions, and God's amazing and magnificently beautiful outdoors.

At the age of seventeen, he entered Lincoln Memorial University, Cumberland Gap, Tenn. Here, he spent four years of interesting study. He was an excellent student and during his college days, he made countless friends, who admired and loved him. Shortly after his graduation, he joined his brother in Los Angeles, Calif. Then later, traveled extensively in the United States and a great deal in Europe and Africa. He was a veteran of the World War, enlisting in 1917 in the Quartermaster's Corps of the National Army. He became a commissioned officer and at the close of the war, received an honorable discharge of excellent service.

For the past ten years, he was a traveling salesman in Western North Carolina. At the time of his passing, he was associated with Thomas-Schultz company of Asheville. He was a member of the Methodist church. The funeral service of quiet beauty and impressiveness was held in the home amid the profusion and fragrance of exquisite flowers. The body rests in the family plot of the Cove cemetery, which lies in the shadows and watchful care of Black Rock Mountain.

John Hoyt Hill had a kind, understanding heart, a flexible disposition, and a nature that could easily forgive. Perhaps, it was his beautiful smile that revealed the inner spirit and gave the evidence of his true character. The smile remained on his countenance after the breath of life had passed from his body. His death casts a dark shadow of grief over all who knew him, and to those who have known him intimately through the years, the loss is doubly poignant—irreparable. We shall mourn him as one who ever revealed the touch of true friendships, fine loyalties, and deep affections.

A FRIEND.

Obituary

Mrs. Ruth Downs Scott, wife of Claud Scott, daughter of Wilford and Minnie E. Downs, was born February 13, 1895 and died at her home August 17, 1928, having lived 33 years, 6 months and 4 days.

Miss Downs was married to Claud Scott, son of R. L. and Jane Scott, July 8, 1917. From this marriage was born 5 children, Harold, Evelyn, Jennie, Eugene and Paul, all bright children.

She made profession of faith in Christ and united with Bethel church August, 1914 and lived a faithful life as daughter, wife and mother and sister neighbor and friend. Was esteemed and loved by all who knew her. The writer knew her well, was associated with her in Sunday school and in church and in the Downs and Scott families and lastly her own home in a beautiful grove near the old homestead where we met her last and prayed with her and her 5 children and waited outside while the doctors consulted inside her own home. She was well cared for, but without avail she must answer the Father's call to her eternal home above.

She leaves to mourn her loss: father and mother, 3 brothers, Wilford, Jr., Asheville; Andrew, now in Everett, Wash., and Roy of Franklin, and also Mr. Blanch Cabe, Monroe Wash., and many kindred and friends. May the Lord enable her husband to overtop every obstacle in rearing his children aright. S. W. JACOBS.
