

Wind Plays Prank

Will Stewart is not only handy with the paint brush, but he can bandy words with the best. Judging from a story he is now spreading about the streets one may question whether or not Will's eyesight is in good working order. However, on with the story and let the public judge what, if anything, is the matter with Will. During the storm of two weeks ago Will claims that he was standing on the porch of R. M. Dickerson's home at Rabun Gap. "The wind," said Will, "was a little bit airish. In fact it was cutting considerable capers." While looking at an apple tree Will said that the wind "whipped around and laid low the tree about like David did Goliath." The next morning when Mr. Stewart and Mr. Dickerson stepped out on the front porch the tree was standing up in its original position. Will claims that during the night the wind changed and "blowed the tree upright again." He wants the public to understand that he told this tale and will stick to it and, if necessary, can back up his words. So thar now.
