CHAIR COVERS

For the upholstered chairs in the dining room, a cover may be made to protect the seat covers from grease and soil which children or careless eaters are likely to drop on them. The covers may be made of figured denim, to resemble the original chair seat and cut a pattern, allowing size enough to fall over the edges of the seat. The covers may be faced or

Officials Should Exemplify In Their Lives They Believe In Law Obedience

Franklin, N. C.
Sept. 18, 1930.

Editor of The Press.

Dear Sir:

Please allow me space in your paper to express my views on some of the questions that are of vital interest to us as citizens of Macon county, and that are being daily asked.

I agree with Prof. Harbison in regard to allowing the people the greatest of freedom in choosing their servants and then when chosen it becomes the duty of that official to serve the best interest of all the people.

We hear more said of our roads and schools than any other of our public institutions because we are in daily contact with those.

I believe that if it can be worked out these should be supervised and maintained by the State as a whole. Then we would have more uniformity in the character and quality of our roads and schools.

It seems to me that there is a good deal of duplication and excess overhead when the roads of our common wealth are maintained by the State, and by the County as at present.

We are proud of the good our schools are doing and justly so, but when the school authorities of the poorer counties are required to make some certain application to secure an allowance from the equalization fund for the maintenance of her schools to meet state requirements it seems to me that their pride would be somewhat humiliated. So let's work to the end that all of our children have an equal educational opportunity whether they be rural or whether they be urban.

I believe that our system of raising revenues should be readjusted so that the burden of our public institutions would be distributed according to ability to pay or according to earning capacity.

We are making it less desirable to own homes because of the fact that the greater weight of the support of our public institutions, which all share alike, has been derived from principle of business improvements with borrowed capital to the extent that the spirit of the average tax payer is crushed or the property of the less fortunate is sold for taxes in any considerable numbers.

I believe that our leaders and especially our officials should exemplify in their lives that they believe in law obedience, and hence the result less need for law enforcement.

Very sincerely,
JOHN C. FERGUSON.

THERE'S a harmony between the natural loveliness of this modern age and the natural, mild goodness of Camels. And if you find them keeping company, don't be surprised.

Camel has given the world the luxury of a naturally mild cigarette—a cigarette that preserves all the refreshing fragrance of the choice, mild tobaccos from which it is made—a cigarette that is delightfully smooth, but never flat, never parched, never tasteless.

Modern smokers are awake to the fact that mere flatness doesn't mean mildness. That's one reason there's such a swing to Camels. Watch it right in your own crowd. Join them in Camels—a smoke that's enjoyable all the way—all the time.
