Grade "A" Farmers Given Recognition by College

By scoring a percentage of 80 or above on their live-at-home operations last year, 66 North Carolina farmers have won certificates of merit by the North Carolina State college, cooperating with the agricultural committee of the State Bankers' association.

Such a certificate is considered a high honor by college officials and bankers in that the person receiving one has done certain valuable and fundamental things in good farming. Each certificate is signed by the president of the college, the dean of agriculture, and the chairman of the bankers' agricultural committee.

Facts on which the certificates were awarded were secured by local bankers. The papers were carefully graded by the faculty of the School of Agriculture at State college and announcements made as to those who had made a percentage of 80 or above. L. O. Mosley is considered one of the best farmers in eastern North Carolina. A summary of the facts of his farming operations shows him to have 10 mules and horses; 35 head of cattle; 47 hogs and pigs and a flock of 125 hens on his 200 acre farm. He grows enough grain and forage to feed his livestock and sells corn to his tenants. He produces enough pork and lard for home use and enough beef and veal with some to sell. His garden furnishes vegetables through the year and permits the sale of about $125 worth. He grew enough sweet potatoes for home use and sold a 100-bushel surplus last year. He also grew more than enough Irish potatoes. In addition to having all the milk and butter needed at home, he sold over $5,000 worth last year. He also sold poultry and eggs, fruits and other small items. His home has modern conveniences; he has good pastures and hay crops, and rents 100 acres of land for additional farming operations.

Keep Bees Together For Best Honey Crop

RALEIGH, June 10. — Natural swarming divides working bees and the successful beekeeper will take every precaution to prevent this swarming especially during the main honey flow.

"The exact cause for this swarming is not known," says F. B. Meacham, assistant professor of zoology at State College, "but there are ways of preventing it if taken in time. Where extraction honey is produced, the prevention is comparatively easy by providing an extra hive or brood chamber."

Where only one hive is used, control methods are much more difficult, states Mr. Meacham. Added ventilation, shade, breaking down all the queen cells every five days, and in some cases, removing or caging the queen for ten days are the remedial measures that should be taken when the extra hive is not used.

For a small unit, three or more colonies. Mr. Meacham, recommends an extra brood chamber for those that are strong enough to swarm. When a colony becomes strong enough to cover all ten frames in the brood chamber, take the extra empty hive body, remove a frame and swap it for the queen on a frame of brood. Then place this new hive body on the bottom board and put the old brood chamber on a queen excluder that is placed over the new brood chamber.

Mr. Meacham states that when the honey flow begins the old brood chamber can be removed free of bees and given to a weak colony or it may be set off on the bottom board to make an increase provided there is a large number of brood to emerge.

A colony should have more room when the bees cover the frames fairly well or when the honey flow begins. In adding these supers the new one is placed next to the queen and brood and Mr. Meacham suggests that these always be added before the one in use is filled. Otherwise the bees will quit work for want of storage space, he says.

FAMOUS MOVIE COMING HERE

'Birth of a Nation' To Be Shown With New Sound Effects

"The Birth Of A Nation," the famous picture that has been shown to untold millions throughout the world during the past 16 years, has returned to the screen. The same great production that you have seen perhaps three or four times in the past years, the same production you will see every time the opportunity occurs during the years to come—but with something added that now makes it an infinitely better and greater "Birth Of A Nation" than has been presented before. That something is the addition of SOUND. For now you not only SEE but you also HEAR the mammoth battles as Sherman fights his way to the sea; you HEAR the shot that snuffs out the life of the great Lincoln; you HEAR the avenging Klans riding through the land at night; you HEAR the roar of frenzied mobs on the man hunt.

Yes, "The Birth Of A Nation" is returning, but a newer and a greater "Birth" than ever saw before. For $200,000.00 worth of SOUND has been added, and a new impressiveness and majesty is in the picture that was not there in the old days.

The Macon Theatre will show the new "Birth Of A Nation" four times during its return here. The dates are Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, June 17-18-19, and Thursday afternoon, June 18.

CHARLIE MINCEY'S GOLDEN PEACHES

I am coming now to you in haste
With something nice to please your taste
You talk about watermelons ripe
And good old bac'er in your pipe.
Though that is nothing half as rare
As just one single juicy pear
Nor anything when summer comes
Could ever match a batch of plums.
And while the world in dream-land tarries
Please lead me to a crate of cherries
But last of all my hunger reaches
To Charlie Mincey's golden peaches.
adv. —TROY F. HORN.
