WINTERING BEES

Important considerations for wintering bees are: plenty of young bees, a good queen, enough good-quality stores, sound hives, and protection from cold and dampness. A colony needs from 25 to 30 pounds of stores. If there is not enough honey of good quality for the bees to consume during the winter, syrup made of granulated sugar is safe and just as good as

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

Cheap at Half the Price By IRVIN S. COBB

COHEN met Levi on the street. "Hello," greeted the former, "I ain't seen you in a long time, where haf you been?"

"Me, I been in jail," was the answer. "Oh, veh," sympathized Mr. Cohen, "You Killed some one maybe?" "No," answered Levi, "I was put in der coop mit contempt." "Yeh?" said Cohen, "Und vat kind of a crime iss dat?" "Yell!" said Levi, "I was a witness in a hay suit and de Judge asked me if I vas Jewish, so I said, 'Judge don't be a damn fool! Vell he fined me five dollars for contempt and I said if it only costs five dollars to call you a damn fool, I take trendy dollars worth. Dat's ven he put me in Chail!'"

Good Time to Replace Poor Breeding Animals

This is an excellent time to replace inferior bulls or females with well-bred stock, says E. W. Sheets, of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is now possible to buy the best at prices which are but little above the usual commercial values of two or three years ago. In fact, there is far less spread as a rule between the best and inferior breeding stock than formerly and there are cases where purebreds are to be had at bargain prices.

The farm production of beef calves for market is being practiced in many sections throughout the Eastern states as well as in the corn belt, in connection with general farming or other stock raising, says Mr. Sheets. Farmers with ample pasture and no more than enough grain for their breeding stock and hogs sell calves as feeders. Others run spring calves with the dams during the summer, fatten them during the winter, and sell them the next spring as fat yearlings.

A more recent practice is the raising of well-bred spring calves which are not ready to be weaned in slaughter condition in early fall. This system produces more beef of choice quality than any other plan known to the industry. Calves fattened in this manner usually reach the latest market demand for tender beef, which is sold in handy-weight packages. This system, however, calls for carefully selected breeding stock—selected for early maturity and high quality.

Farm Hints

POULTRY STILL PROFITABLE

There is no good reason of gloom, present or prospective, as to the poultry products branch of agriculture in North Carolina, declares C. E. Parrish, in charge of poultry extension work at State College. "Not a single poultry producer reporting in detail to us is losing money," he says, and he has records to sustain the statement. "Practically all of them have made money this year, not as much, on the average, in dollars and cents as they did last year but almost as much when the increased buying power of money is taken into account."

Yet a small item, you may think. Not at all. Poultry now ranks fifth in value as an agricultural product and better still as a source of farm income in North Carolina, which ranks 18th among the states as to poultry production.

"And we are not fully on a self-sustaining basis as to poultry," says Mr. Parrish. "While we are shipping out an increasing volume of chickens and eggs, we probably bring in more than we sell outside the state. Why, our egg production is the equivalent of less than an egg a day for everybody in the state."

FARM FORESTRY PAYS

One-third of all farms in the United States yield as much as $220 worth of timber per year, the United States Department of Agriculture says. An exhibit from the Forest Service shows that the annual farm forest crop is worth $395,000,000. Timber not only pays in dollars and cents, but it is like a bank account upon which the owner can draw in times of stress. Its uses range from farm buildings, telephone poles, repairs, and fuel on the farm, to saw logs, cross-ties, pulpwood, posts, and poles.

NINE RULES FOR KEEPING SWEET POTATOES

1. No cut, bruised, or skinned potatoes, nor diseased ones, should be allowed to go into storage.
2. Whether harvesting with spade, fork, plow, or potato digger, the tool should not touch the roots, but be kept well away from them, so that earth will be between the potatoes and the tool.
3. If necessary to dig when ground is wet and it sticks to the potatoes, just let it stay, and after they are in the curing house rub the dirt off. When dried, the smooth, marketable potatoes will shell out of their husks of mud sound and bright.
4. If the storage house is clean, disinfected, and in good repair, the fires should be started 18 to 30 hours before the potatoes come in and then held at a temperature between 20 and 90 degrees.
5. Use slatted crates to hold potatoes that are being cured.
6. The first step in curing is to dry out the potatoes, just as you would corn, seeds, hay, etc. Start the temperature at 90 or 95 degrees while filling the house, but maintain at 85 degrees for the 15 to 20 days required for full curing.
7. When cured, the best temperature for storage is 55 degrees maintained constantly. The air should be dry throughout the storage period at all times. Sweet potatoes will not keep in a moist atmosphere.
8. Small quantities of potatoes may be kept through the winter by storing in a ventilated attic where no freezing occurs, or in the kitchen or living room where temperatures do not fall below 45 or 50 degrees; or in closets next to chimneys. Wrapping each potato in paper, lining the crates or boxes with paper, and covering the crates with blankets or tarpaulins, will help in very cold weather.—THE PROGRESSIVE FARMER-RURALIST.

AID FOR WAR VETERANS

More than 430,000 ex-service men and their families were aided through 3,008 Red Cross Chapters and the national organization during the year ending June 30, 1931. Dependent families were cared for, veterans' claims were filed, hospitalization obtained and many other services given. Part of each contribution during the American Red Cross annual roll call, Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, goes toward supporting this vital work for veterans of the World War and other wars in which the United States has engaged.

Many Young People Held Up on Road to Success

Time forces every person to travel along some road of life. Circumstances seemingly compel some into the route of failure while others gain the highway of success. Failure and Success are in opposite directions. No mistake need be made in finding one's way. It greatly depends on getting started right.

The Athens Business College specializes in conducting young people into business life. A good business training is the gate that opens to opportunity. Prosperity lies within reach of all who enter therein.

Lack of foresight, lack of ambition and fear of getting a job are some of the hindrances that are holding up many of these young people and dooming them to failure. They could avoid the hard times that awaits them in the future by spending only a few months in the Athens Business College.

A good business education can be had at a very small cost and it will place prosperity and success within easy reach. Good fortune doesn't merely happen. It is the result of a well planned life—the proper training.

Do not wait until next year but get started now. Delay is dangerous.

Says Only Supply and Demand Govern Prices

Angel's Drug Store, the local Rexall druggist, has just received a personal letter from Louis K. Liggett, prominent figure in the drug world, old friend of former President Coolidge and a keen student of modern business. The message is as full of good news as an English walnut is of meat. Mr. Liggett throws some interesting sidelights on current business affairs and has crowded much logic into the document.

Referring to one of his conversations with former President Coolidge, he tells that after an hour's discussion of business problems, Mr. Coolidge declared: "Supply and demand will make the price. It always has and always will. You cannot control what God produces."

Mr. Coolidge was referring to the English attempt that failed, to regulate production and price of rubber, and Mr. Liggett's comment is: "No special legislation—no national legislation—no world intercourse or world courts can establish a value that will turn the flow of business. Calvin Coolidge was right when he said that price can be regulated only by supply and demand."

The fact that at this particular time of business stress there is listed the largest number of Rexall drug stores in drugdom's history, was received with no little satisfaction, because it proved to him the wisdom of becoming the Rexall druggist in this particular locality where the profit and good will assured by the Rexall plan to both the one who sells and the one who buys has been a community affair of mutual benefit.

"I think the biggest merchandising idea that has ever been promulgated in America is the fall one cent sale," continued Mr. Liggett, and he gives this bit of history: "I brought this sale to you in the fall of 1914, after war had been declared between the European countries. Everything was at a standstill. Stock markets were closed. Everything was going to hell in a hack, and the one-cent sale put your business over then and it will do the same thing this fall."

This Rexall One Cent Sale will be run the first week in November and the people of this community will share in this great festival of buying opportunity of the current strenuous year.

In Memoriam

As one stands beside the mound of a loved one who has passed on, there is comfort in the age old thought—here might an appropriate memorial be erected to perpetuate the qualities one has known and grown to love. By the erection of a Roberts' Memorial there will be a permanent reflection to the world of a personality it has lost.
