Alfred D. Reckley, 21, Pittsburgh, Pa., radio operator, can smile now. War Bonds are providing treatment for the wounds he sustained while flying a bomber on a mission over Central Germany. Reckley says others will be wounded and will help.

A piece of shrapnel sent Pfc. Charles Shropshire, 21, Lexington, Ky., to the hospital, where his leg wound is mending, thanks to War Bonds. Shropshire was wounded in a sudden Nazi assault while setting up a machine gun on a Belgium front, when the enemy shell struck close enough to wound. Buy more Bonds, Shropshire urges, so that the business of war can be brought to a successful conclusion quicker.

Tech. Sgt. Paul Fordham, 31, Southampton, N. Y., was one of three men injured when an Eighth Air Force Flying Fortress took a shelling over Germany. The damaged plane got back to England, but this B-17 engineer was knocked out with a shattered left thigh. Now he has an extra good word for all the people at home who buy War Bonds to heal wounded fighters of the present and at the same time assuring ample, sufficient treatment for others yet to be wounded. "Tell him we're cutting pulpwood!"

"I SEE here in the paper that General Somervell says, 'We would rather fire a ton of munitions than lose a single American soldier'. 'That's the way I like to hear our generals talk because that 'single soldier' might be our boy. So when the government says the shortage of pulpwood may hold up the supply of munitions, I'm going to cut every darn stick I can. 'You just tell the boy to keep on doing his best over there and we'll do our best to back him up over here.'"
