

ADVICE IS GIVEN ON CONTROL OF FLIES

RALEIGH, July 15.—The state department of agriculture has issued a bulletin for the control of flies during the summer months. It says that the dairy barns are infested by house flies, stable flies, and horn flies.

Flies travel widely, and may be carried 10 or 12 miles a day on the wind. The small flies occasionally seen are not immature specimens but full grown adults of the species.

Flies multiply so fast it is estimated that progeny of one female fly in a summer would be sufficient to cover the entire earth's surface at a depth of nearly 80 feet, if all lived. Fortunately, most of them meet death by sprays, poisons, swatters, etc. A single fly may carry several millions of bacteria on its feet, legs and body, said Dr. Moore.

"If dairy cows are sprayed regularly," stated Dr. Moore, "with a standard commercial preparation of DDT, following directions of the manufacturer for its use, they may show an increase of up to 15 per cent more milk for sale or home consumption than these cows not so treated.

"Beef cattle, too, will put on as much as 30 pounds additional weight during the 100-day fly period, if they are sprayed with recommended DDT solutions."

"Spraying the walls, stanchions, etc., of a dairy barn will sharply reduce the fly nuisance," continued Dr. Moore. "For this barn-spraying, a stronger solution of DDT may be utilized but only those preparations inspected and passed by the State should be used.

Broughton Avers the South Lives Too Much In Past

BLUE RIDGE, July 15.—"In the greatest agricultural region of the world we are still living too much in the past and relying entirely too much on the one crop row system left in the hands of tenant farmers," former Governor J. Melville Broughton told the approximately 100 representatives of the American Farm Bureau federation from 13 Southern states attending the annual Southern Farm Bureau Training school in an address at this assembly center Monday night.

Even in these years of comparative farm prosperity, the speaker declared, the per capita income of the Southern farmer as contrasted with any other region of the nation is shocking.

"With soil and climate ideally adapted to dairy production, we do not produce enough milk for our own consumption, in spite of the fact that our average per capita consumption of milk is less than half the national average," Mr. Broughton said. "The South could well afford to trade some of its full-fledged demagogues for some purebred bulls."

Declaring that an uneducated South will never be prosperous and attain its full destiny, he said that despite progress that has been made, the educational picture of the South as a whole is still depressing. He pointed out North Carolina's progress from a six-month state supported school term 20 odd years ago to the present nine month term for all races and referred to the 20 per cent raise in pay for teachers made in 1933. "Our experience," he said, "shows that the wealth of the state increases almost in direct proportion with the improved education of its children."

Mr. Broughton declared that the time when the South offered its bid for new industry on cheap wages is gone and added that the southern worker is entitled to receive for comparable work as much pay as workers in other regions.

"A sound solution of the race problem is essential for the South of tomorrow," the speaker added. "In spite of northern agitation and southern demagoguery, we are making progress in this direction. The Negro is entitled to education, health, adequate housing and economic opportunity. The wise southern state is finding it a good investment, as well as an act of justice, to provide these things. These things should and will come from a friendly spirit of cooperation, and not from any coercive or politically conceived F.E.P.C."

In looking to future development of the South he stressed the need of scientific, industrial and agricultural research. "We must learn to process our own raw materials, improve and diversify our agriculture, and to give our young women and men the best of skilled training and opportunity."

Vet Problems

Q.—If a veteran is eligible for loan-guaranty benefits does he lose that eligibility if he reenlists?
A.—No. Once he becomes eligible he remains so provided he can meet all other requirements.

Q.—May a dishonorably discharged veteran be hospitalized by the Veterans Administration?
A.—A dishonorably discharged veteran is not eligible for hospitalization unless he has become eligible as a result of a period of military service other than which terminated in his dishonorable discharge.

Q.—Is it legal for a lending agency to require a veteran to give security in addition to the property being purchased in the case of a guaranteed loan?
A.—Yes. The matter of additional security is for the veteran and the lending agency to agree upon. VA, itself does not require additional security.

Q.—My husband has pulmonary tuberculosis. May I arrange to have the Veterans Administration transfer him to a high, dry climate for treatment?
A.—The VA will transfer a patient for climatic reasons in exceptional cases. However, experience during recent years has shown that the type of climate is of little importance in the proper treatment of tuberculosis. In fact, it has been found that the strain of moving to a different climate, coupled with the lowering of morale occasioned by the patients being hospitalized at a great distance from his family and home, frequently more than offsets any slightly benefits achieved.

Letter From Washington

The Herald has recently received a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cabe of North Bend, Wash., in which they expressed their appreciation of The Sylva Herald. A relative had sent them the paper as a Christmas present, and since getting in the habit of reading it, they don't want to be without it.

Though they have been in Washington for 23 years, they still see many familiar names in the paper. They asked the Herald to extend their best wishes to their relatives and friends in Jackson County.
