Miss Jane Cooke Is Wed To T. H. Chewning, Jr.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Jane Cooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cooke of Shelby and grand daughter of Dr. A. A. Nichols of Sylva and Mrs. K. C. Nichols of Asheville, to Thomas Remington Chewning, Jr., of Shelby.

The marriage was performed in the Methodist church in Spartanburg, S. C. Tuesday, March 4, at high noon with the pastor, the Rev. W. B. Garrett, performing the service, using the double ring ceremony. The Spartanburg church was chosen for the ceremony from the standpoint of family sentiment, the bride's grand father, the late J. A. Cooke, having been pastor there at one time.

Only members of the bride's immediate family were present for the ceremony. The vows were spoken before the church altar which was banked with many palms and an arrangement of white calla lilies, gladioli and snapdragons running the length of the chancel table.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Mrs. W. C. Herbert, church organist, and Roy France, a member of the music faculty at Wofford college.

The bride's father gave her in marriage, she was attired in Norris-Conti original suit of white birch, and a blouse of honey colored chiffon. Her hat was a John Frederick's model of milan straw with a big bow of honey colored maline falling to the shoulder line. Her other accessories were dark brown and for traveling she added a mink coat to her costume. The bridal corsage was a shoulder orchid.

The bride is a graduate of Shelby high school and attended Gardner-Webb college and Ocker college at Hartsville, S. C.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. William C. Murphy of Savannah, Ga. but has lived most of his life in Shelby with his grandmother, Mrs. W. H. Blanton. He is a graduate of Shelby high school and studied electrical engineering at Clemson college, S. C. and State College, Raleigh. He has just completed a course in pilots training at Sero-Air, Inc. in Raleigh. He was in the army air force two and a half years with thirteen months spent overseas.

Following the ceremony, the bride's grand mother, Mrs. K. C. Nichols, entertained members of the bridal party with a four course luncheon in the private dining room at the Cleveland Hotel in Spartanburg. The table, covered with a white linen cloth, held a bowl of white snapdragons and bride's roses as its centerpiece and from the bowl white satin ribbons were laid across the cloth to the guests' place cards, and these featured pictures of the bride and bridegroom.

After the luncheon the couple left to spend a honeymoon in New York City.

Mrs. Cowan Hostess For U. D. C. Meeting

On Thursday evening Mrs. Mary R. Cowan was hostess for the March meeting of the B. H. Cathey chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. The president, Mrs. Jennings Bryson, led the reading of the ritual and presided over the business session.

House or Journey

Navy and white dress.

By VERA WINSTON

HERE IS a bright little dress to wear about the house or to take along on a Southern journey. The fabric is navy blue spun rayon with a splash of white eyelet embroidery across the neck and shoulders, and for the patch pockets. The net is belt ties in a bow in back. This Spring there will be more navy and white than has been seen in many a season, for both casual and dress wear, which will please women everywhere who love this most versal of costume color combinations.
