

Bryson City Strikers Bound Over To Court For Attack On Citizen

Six men, employees of Carolina Wood Turning Company at Bryson City, now out on strike with some 200 other employees, were given a hearing last Thursday afternoon before Mayor Kelly E. Bennett, charged with assault and battery on the person of McKinley Edwards, prominent attorney of that city, and bound over to the Swain county Superior court under bond of $1000 each. The bonds were promptly made and the men released.

The men were on picket duty when the trouble occurred. They claimed that Mr. Edwards passed through the line when he had no right to do so.

In his evidence at the trial Mr. Edwards stated that a car blocked the entrance when he and Mr. Leatherwood, president of the firm went to the plant on Wednesday morning, and that there were 20 men or more around. These men stopped the car and told Mr. Leatherwood that he could enter the plant, but informed Mr. Edwards that he could not. Mr. Edwards stated that he assured the men that he had a perfect right to enter the plant, and that any who tried to prevent him were subject to indictment. He then started to enter. He was then grabbed by the arm, he stated by Homer Maney, who said,

"Boys are we going to let him go in?"

No one said anything and Maney turned loose. Mr. Edwards and Mr. Leatherwood entered the plant.

After some time inside Mr. Edwards returned to enter his car and testified that he was met by the men who said that "We don't any of us like the way you got in here" and was struck on the side of the head. He testified that he was hit several times more about the face and head before he finally fell to the ground. He said that they continued to beat him about the body and one man kicked him inflicting serious injury and further aggravating a rupture he has had for some time.

The strike was called by Charles H. Corbin, CIO organizer, seeking a 30 cent per hour increase in wages and improvements in working conditions.

The USDA announced that a program under which mules will be purchased for the Mexican government will be initiated at an early date.

Marketings of corn since October 1, 1946 have been the largest on record and are expected to continue large during the remainder of the marketing year.

Dressed For The Seasons

Brown crepe daytime dress

By VERA WINSTON

THIS IS a dress with which to skip blithely through spring and then step just as smartly into summer. The simply cut little number is made of brown crepe, decked out with a little coolie collar, short set-in sleeves and a flanged shoulder tuck. The front of the skirt is relieved by a group of unpressed boxpleats, and the back is straight. For color interest there is a pink foulard sash polka dotted in brown and green with gloves to match.
