IDEAL SCENE OF HUNT FOR WHAT-IS-IT FLYING DISCS

FOLLOWING REPORTS that a number of the mysterious "flying saucers" had actually been seen landing in mountains near St. Maries, Idaho (shown on map, right), the first official effort to track down one of the what-is-its was begun by the town's mayor. Above is an artist's conception of what the now-you-see-them-now-you-don't discs might look like if they turn out to be man-made devices. (International)

Beggars Must Now Have State License

"Mister, can you spare a dime?" Maybe you can but before passing it over ask to see the beggar's license. Some people make a living by beginning rather than take up a trade that will pay them a living wage, and it is those people toward whom North Carolina's new solicitation's license law is aimed.

During the last few months a survey of individuals soliciting alms for a livelihood has been conducted in the major cities of North Carolina by a state committee in cooperation with county committees set up to study the situation.

While a detailed report will be released to the public later, a summary of information gained by the survey brings out the following points:

1. Transient or out-of-county solicitors are four times as numerous as beggars residing in a community.
2. More than one-third of the transient solicitors do not live in North Carolina.
3. Ninety-three per cent of solicitors are men.
4. The average weekly income reported by the solicitors is between $15 and $25 although one man stated that his begging operations netted an average of about $15 a day.
5. Many beggars have refused Social Security benefits on the grounds that they can make more money by begging than by following a legitimate trade for which they have been or will be trained.
6. There are several outstanding cases where men estimate they
