STATE COLLEGE ANSWERS TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS

QUESTION-How can I lengthen the life of workstock harness?
ANSWER-Giving long life is simple. All that is necessary is to keep it clean and well oiled with a good harness oil. Best results are attained by taking the harness apart, unbuckling all straps, washing them with a very mild soap and warm water, rinsing each strap as washed in clean water and hanging up to dry. By the time one is through, the first straps will be dry enough to oil. A sponge or soft rag will hold enough oil to make hand rubbing effective. Most farmers take their harness to harness repair shops where it is oiled by being placed in a wire basket and dipped in a large tank of warm harness oil for 15 or 20 minutes, then suspended above the vat until oil drains off. This is fairly effective, but the man who takes his harness apart and washes it thoroughly before it is oiled gets a much better job; for dried sweat and dirt prevent oil penetrating to the leather beneath.

Repairing promptly, likewise, adds greatly to life. Longer life of harness also is obtained where harness is hung in a harness room away from the ammonia fumes rising from stalls; but this seldom is considered practical for lack of time, and harness generally is hung on a peg on the wall about 8 feet behind the work animal. It is used on.

QUESTION-What are some recommended seeding rates of pasture mixtures including ladino clover?
ANSWER-Ten to twelve pounds of orchard grass is generally recommended in a mixture with 2 to 3 pounds of ladino clover on all well drained soils. Fifteen pounds of dallis seed is recommended on the poorly drained soils of the Coastal Plain area where orchard grass is not adapted. The dallis grass should be established in the early spring before seeding ladino clover in the fall. On these poorly drained soils 4 to 6 pounds of red top grass may be seeded with the ladino. Tall fescue is showing considerable promise as a perennial pasture grass in the state and apparently can be substituted for any of the above grasses.

Ten to twelve pounds of tall fescue and 2 to 3 pounds of ladino clover should produce a satisfactory stand. Ladino clover should be seeded September 1-15 except in the mountains where it is seeded in August or April.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that turkeys raised this year will total somewhat less than 35 million head, 16 per cent fewer than were raised in 1946 and the smallest crop since 1943.
