Lt. (jg) Tom Davis With Heavy Patrol Squadron 7

Lt. (jg) Tom M. Davis, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Davis of Sylva is a member of Heavy Patrol Squadron 7 which recently completed a series of extended training flights in Alaska, and has been transferred to the Naval Air Station, Whidbey Island, Wash.

Operating from the Naval Air Station at Kodiak, the squadron flew familiarization flights throughout the Alaska-Aleutians area and weather patrol south of Kodiak.

One task recently completed by the squadron was an extensive but futile search for the Navy PBV lost en route from Kodiak to Dutch Harbor.

When the Navy Resupply Expedition made its run to point Barrow, Alaska, aircraft of the squadron maintained a patrol in the Bering Sea to keep the supply ships informed of any nearby ice floes. This aid permitted the ships to complete their tasks in added safety.

Fresh and frozen fish will continue to be good buys for budget meals for the next few months, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, suggests in its most recent report on the national food situation.

Oats are good feed for starting calves but are too bulky to make up a large part of the ration.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture announced that contracts for price support loans at 90 percent of parity on 1946-crop Puerto Rico tobacco were signed by the Commodity Credit Corporation and two Puerto Rico organization of growers.
